President to Attend Longworth Funeral

RITES PLANNED FOR TOMORROW IN CINCINNATI

Congress Will Send Delegations.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

(Pictures on back page.)

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special]—The highest officials of the government he served will attend the funeral of Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the house in the last three congresses.

Mr. Longworth died of pneumonia this morning at Aiken, S. C., after an illness of three days.

Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, the widow, decided on the final funeral arrangements this afternoon and telephoned them to the late speaker's office here, where they were announced. Services will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at Christ Episcopal church, Cincinnati. The body will leave Aiken for Cincinnati tomorrow on a special train.

President Hoover will go to represent the executive branch of the government honoring the memory of the man who for six years ranked as the head of the legislative branch.

Vice President Curtis will head a committee representing the senate. The house will be represented by a committee composed of the ranking members from each state in length of service.

Hoover to Leave Tonight.

The President will leave the capital by special train tomorrow night, arriving in Cincinnati shortly before the funeral service. Mr. Hoover will be accompanied by Mrs. Hoover and White House secretaries and attachés.

The Vice President will go to Cincinnati by another train because of the law providing both the President and Vice President shall not be placed in jeopardy together.

As soon as he heard of the death of the speaker Mr. Hoover dispatched his military aid, Col. Campbell Hodges, to Aiken by airplane to assist Mrs. Longworth with the funeral arrangements. Before he had arrived, however, Mrs. Longworth had decided that the funeral should be a private one in Cincinnati, instead of a state funeral in Washington.

Flags at Half Staff.

The President ordered that the flags on the White House and other government buildings in the District of Columbia and in Ohio should be lowered to half staff today and on the day of the funeral. A period of official mourning was not proclaimed for the reason that technically Mr. Longworth was not the speaker when he died. His last term as speaker ended with the adjournment of the last congress on March 4. Officially he was only a representative elect from Ohio.

Mr. Hoover gave out the following tribute:

"Mr. Longworth served his fellow countrymen in state and nation for over thirty-three years—nearly the whole of his adult life. In his service he contributed greatly to the welfare of the American people. His happy character, his sterling honesty, his courage in public questions endeared him and held the respect not alone of his myriad of friends but of the country at large. His passing is a loss to the nation."

Stimson Praises Longworth.

Secretary of State Stimson said he was distressed by the death of Mr. Longworth and added:

"He was a man of great ability and great personal charm. No one in public life was more widely liked than he. As speaker of the house he will be deeply missed. He was always just in his decisions, firm and invariably fair minded. In his death the country has lost one of its outstanding public men."

An atmosphere of sadness pervaded the capitol, where Mr. Longworth had been known to statesmen and the people of congress for more than a quarter of a century.

Senate Committee Named.

Vice President Curtis appointed a special committee representing the senate consisting of Senators Simeon D. Fess [Rep., O.], Robert J. Bulkley [Dem., O.], George H. Moses [Rep., N. H.], Claude A. Swanson [Dem., Va.], Arthur Capper [Rep., Kas.], William J. Harris [Dem., Ga.], Hiram Bingham [Rep., Conn.], Kenneth McKellar [Dem., Tenn.], L. J. Dickinson [Rep., Ia.], and Alben Barkley [Dem., Ky.]

MOTOR TRAGEDY KILLS BOY OF 17; GIRL NEAR DEATH

Autoists Warned to Protect Children.

The death toll of Chicago's automobile tragedies, which cost the lives of six children on Wednesday, was increased last night when a machine containing two 'teen aged couples careened into a steel post in front of 5779 Elston avenue, killing a 17 year old boy and leaving a girl of 15 in a dying condition.

The high mortality among youths and children aroused public officials and safety agents, who made appeals for greater care among motorists in spring driving. Three other deaths yesterday raised the two-day toll to ten.

Girl at First Believed Dead.

In last night's accident the dead victim was Kenneth Schwarz of 3213 North Keating avenue. The injured girl, who was at first believed dead, is Edna Vierow of 3400 North Cicero avenue. The others hurt are Donald Williamson, 17, of 146 Belvidere avenue, and Lillian Eicholz, 16, of 122 Belvidere avenue, both of Forest Park. All were taken to the Belmont hospital, where it was found that the Vierow girl was still alive. The Schwarz boy was dead. Williamson and the Eicholz girl were not seriously hurt.

The accident occurred when the two couples were speeding north in Elston avenue, according to witnesses. Williamson was at the wheel. The automobile struck a slippery patch of pavement and the car got out of his control. It struck the pole, demolishing the car.

Yesterday's deaths raised the toll of automobile accidents in Cook county since Jan. 1 to 321.

Officials Issue Warnings.

The heavy mortality induced safety associations and public officials to warn the public generally and school children in particular to be on guard against the hazards of childhood play in the streets and of reckless driving.

Public school teachers were directed by Supt. William J. Bogan to lecture frequently to their pupils on the subject and were urged to read reports of accidents to the youngsters in class.

The National Safety council wired an appeal on receipt of the news of the six deaths on Wednesday, asserting that the twenty-six million motorists of the country must themselves do the thinking for youthful pedestrians.

"For the time being children on the streets are in their own world of make believe. They are unmindful of danger and neither laws nor parental injunctions can keep all of them off the highways," the message stated. "Drive as if they all were your own."

Bundesen Issues Warning.

Coroner Herman N. Bundesen added a message of warning.

"Every boy and girl should be impressed with the fact that the curbline is a deadline," he said. "Every time a youngster crosses the street he should, as a result of constant training, look both ways and make sure that the way is clear.

"Automobile drivers also should accept their responsibilities. If every driver should remember that a child's judgment cannot be depended on in an emergency there would be fewer accidents. When a driver approaches a place where children are playing he should slow down so that his car can be stopped in a few feet."

Inquests into five of the child deaths of Wednesday resulted yesterday in the freeing from blame of the motorists who killed them.

The adults killed yesterday were:

Charles Wiggins, 40 years old, 6927 South Damen avenue, a carpenter. Killed when the car in which he was riding was struck at 33d street and Cicero avenue, Cicero, by an Illinois Central railroad train. Edward Rithamel of Geneva, who was riding with him, was seriously injured.

Unidentified man, about 45 years old. Struck in front of 3102 Douglas boulevard last night by a motorist who failed to stop. Other motorists took him to the Mount Sinai hospital, but he was dead on arrival there.

Police Sergeant Thomas F. Joyce, 58 years old, 1503 Highland avenue. Struck at Clark street and Devon avenue by an auto driven by Harry Heise, 1105 Wellington avenue, as he was on his way to his work at the North Damen avenue station.

BOY SAILS FOR U. S. NAILED UP IN PACKING CASE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 9.—Luis Chianese, 20, a Parisian, who has dreamed ever since he was in knee pants of a day's visit to the glamorous country across the sea, is now on his way, nailed up in a packing box and stowed away in the hold of the liner Lafayette, which is due in New York on April 16. Luis' parents today frantically radioed the captain of the Lafayette. He immediately ordered the ship's cargo turned upside down in order to find the packing case and save Luis from possible suffocation and starvation.

Luis, who drove his parents and his grandfather, Benetiere, to distraction with his everlasting talk about America, disappeared last Monday. Yesterday a representative of the Stockwell company, American shippers in Paris, informed Grandfather Benetiere that his packing case was on the way to Lord & Taylor of New York.

The astonished grandfather examined the shipping papers and found that his name had been signed by his grandson. The missing lad's parents thereupon recalled that Luis last week announced that he would go to America even if he was compelled to travel in a shipping case.

Portugal Head Hides in Fort; Revolt Grows

LISBON, April 10 [Friday.]—(AP)—President Carmona, and in fact dictator of Portugal, and members of his cabinet took shelter near dawn today in the barracks of the Third artillery behind barbed wire entanglements and a battery of machine guns, as the danger of rebellion in the army at home appeared menacing. There they intend to stay for the period of the emergency.

Meanwhile Lisbon has taken on the appearance of an armed camp. Soldiers are on sentry duty and armored cars rumble through the streets. Guns are mounted in the nearby hills, and the batteries of naval vessels in the harbor are trained on the city.

Garrisons in Azores Revolt.

These extraordinary measures were taken when it became known the revolt at Madeira had spread to the Azores.

Tonight a cablegram came from Lieut. Aragao y Mello, who signed as head of the revolutionary movement of Angra de Heroismo on the Island of Terceira in the Azores, announcing that the garrison there had decided to sever relations with Lisbon. A similar message, unsigned, came from the Island of San Miguel, also in the Azores, where the garrison was reported in revolt.

Transactions of such normal government business as continues is going on in the public offices, but all official documents requiring the signature of the president, or members of his cabinet, are sent to the Third regiment fortress, a stronghold which has seen similar service more than once.

Fear Revolt in Africa.

Although the government insisted that an attempt to overthrow the dictatorship in Lisbon itself was foiled yesterday by the arrest of several officers of the garrisons here and at Oporto, political circles believed that it was still too soon to predict that all danger was over. Police conducted raids all day long.

The high commissioner of Angola, Portuguese West Africa, Admiral Souza de Faro, has unexpectedly left for Lisbon. No word has been received from Angola in 24 hours. This and the censorship have led to belief that the Angola garrison, known to be of shaky sentiment, had broken into rebellion.

Government officials denied that troops sent to quell the rebellion had joined the rebels. They said that the Pedro Gomez, transport carrying 600 soldiers with planes, rifles, machine guns and light artillery, was expected to reach Funchal today.

REPORT VOLIVA, ZION OVERSEER, SERIOUSLY ILL

Wilbur Glenn Voliva, overseer of the Christian Catholic Apostolic church of Zion, Ill., was reported to be seriously ill in his apartment at the Zion home last night. He is said to be suffering from a chronic ailment. Dr. John H. Blanks, Zion health commissioner, who has been attending him, refused to confirm reports that Voliva's condition was serious. He said the overseer was recovering from a scalded foot resulting from a recent accident.

Voliva recently completed a world tour. He returned to Zion on March 6. At that time he admitted his health was none too encouraging. He failed to appear outdoors during the Tuesday election, despite his promise to attend outside activities "even on a stretcher." For the last ten days Voliva has not appeared either at the tabernacle or his office.

GASOLINE WILL BE CUT ONE CENT HERE TOMORROW

The service station price of gasoline in the Chicago territory will be reduced 1 cent a gallon tomorrow morning, making the price 14 cents for the regular and 17 cents for the premium grades. Announcement of the price cut was made officially by only one of the big companies, but the others always have followed in price reductions and are expected to in the present instance.

At the same time one of the large companies announced preparations to market a new low-priced gasoline, the sale to start in the larger cities by the middle of next week. The new brand will retail for 9 cents a gallon, which, with the tax, will cost the consumer 12 cents.

POLICEMAN'S SON AND FRIEND SHOT IN CARD GAME

Two young men, one the son of a police lieutenant, were shot last night by a man who was ejected from a card game in a rear room of the Brash Bros. cigar store at 6220 Cottage Grove avenue and returned with a gun. The wounded are Frank Daly, 22 years old, 8237 South Loomis street, son of Lieut. Eugene Daly of the Burnside police, and Stanley Venckus, 27 years old, 6317 Drexel avenue.

Their assailant was William Perkins, they told the Woodlawn police. Perkins, angered by his ejection, returned to the game with a pistol and opened fire. Both Daly and Venckus were struck in the left leg. The police started a search for Perkins, whose address they were unable to learn.

Kidnap Rich Man, Hold Him for $150,000

Monroe, Wis., April 9.—[Special.]—Fred J. Blumer, 50 years old, wealthy president of the Blumer Products company, near beer manufacturers of Monroe, was kidnaped tonight and is held for $150,000 ransom.

The abductors trapped him shortly after he left his residence in Monroe and drove him to Freeport, Ill., twenty miles south. There the kidnapers left Blumer's car and went east to Rockford with their prisoner, apparently in their own automobile. From Rockford by telephone the gangsters notified an official of the beer company that Blumer was unharmed, but would be held until $150,000 was paid.

Summoned by Phone.

Mr. Blumer was preparing to leave his home this evening for a directors' meeting of the Monroe Country club when he received a telephone call. The caller represented himself as the manager of a chain drug store in Rockford and said that he and his assistant wished to confer with him at the Eugene hotel in Monroe on a big business deal. Blumer left home in his machine. He never reached the club. Several hours later the ransom abduction was revealed.

Demand $150,000 Ransom.

The revelation came in the telephone call from Rockford to Frank Lucksinger, an official of the brewery.

"We have Mr. Blumer," informed the speaker. "He is all right. We are holding him for $150,000 ransom. Tell his wife not to worry, but to get busy and meet the payments. Blumer's automobile may be found in front of the Freeport garage. You'll hear from us in a few days."

Lucksinger notified Jacob Blumer, brother of the brewery president, and the brother called Sheriff Myron West of Green county, Wis. The sheriff and several deputies sped to Freeport after communicating by telephone with police there.

Victim's Auto Found.

Blumer's automobile was found in front of the garage as the message to Lucksinger promised. There were no marks to indicate violence.

Monroe and Freeport officials accepted the kidnaping report as authentic. Blumer is known as a family man. He was one of the largest brewers in the Green county section before prohibition. After the dry law became effective Blumer rented his plant to Chicagoans, one of them later turning out to be a hoodlum. Later Blumer took over the brewery himself, making near beer.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 9.—(AP)—Thomas C. Colwell, 40, an automobile mechanic, was arrested here today and brought into Juvenile court to explain why he had two wives.

According to Miss Metta Davis, Juvenile court investigator, Colwell for twelve years has been maintaining homes for his two wives and families a little more than four miles apart without either family being aware of his dual domesticity.

Colwell was married to Mrs. Nona Colwell about 21 years ago. They have two children, Sherman, 19, and Dorothy, 10.

Mrs. Margaret Colwell told authorities she was married to Colwell in Terre Haute about twelve years ago. They have two children, Junior, 11 years old, and Margaret Jane, 19 months old.

PAY ROLL ARMY ROUTED BY NEW CHIEF'S BROOM

Salary Lists Held Up for Examination.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Anton J. Cermak became mayor of Chicago at 4:20 yesterday afternoon, presided over his first council meeting, and made his first inaugural address. He said:

"I'm going to give the people of Chicago the best administration they ever had."

For hours the Democratic broom had already been working at the hall. Some 2,200 temporary appointees had been lopped from the pay rolls. About 800 more are to be thrown out today, a total of 3,000.

Takes Charge of City Hall.

Mr. Cermak, on being given the oath of office at 11:25 a. m. by County Judge Jareckl, became de facto mayor. He walked into the city hall, sat down in the mayor's chair, and took charge. The Thompson department heads had abdicated. Their resignations had been accepted in advance by the incoming executive, who at once announced the appointment of Col. A. A. Sprague as commissioner of public works and Francis X. Busch as corporation counsel. Both held these positions in the Dever cabinet.

On the desks were copies of the pay rolls. Orders were issued that they be held up until they could be examined, Mr. Cermak announcing that no payroller would get his pay unless he could show that he had worked for the city instead of at political headquarters.

Start Cleaning Pay Rolls.

At one sweep off went 2,200 60 day appointees from the rolls. In less than 48 hours after the polls closed Tuesday the head civil service man in each department was placed in temporary charge. They were called into conference with Cermak, Sprague, and Busch, who laid it down that the first item on the program is to purge the pay rolls.

By the time the council met in special session to approve the bonds of the newly elected officials nearly all the departments had been reduced to their civil service staffs.

For the Thompson men it looked like the retreat from Moscow. Old department heads slammed down their desks earlier, and several of them beat it down river for the trip on the steamboat Cape Girardeau. The small fry poured into the hall and out again, desolated by tidings that 60 day men were no longer drawing pay. The ax had descended more swiftly than before in a changing administration.

Thompson Leaves Town.

Thompson himself left by auto for Peoria, where he will board the Cape Girardeau. He was not present in his office, nor at the council meeting to do the customary honors of inducting his successor into office.

At 3 o'clock Mr. Cermak attended a meeting of the county board and resigned as its president. He did not resign as a member, apparently choosing to remain a commissioner to have a vote in electing the new president.

His successor as president is to be selected at a meeting on Monday. Commissioner Emmett Wheelan, who was named acting president after Cermak's resignation, is a prominent candidate for the succession. Several other Democrats are after the position, among them Dan Ryan, Peter M. Kelly, and Charles Weber.

Cermak Plans Trip for Rest.

On Monday night Mayor Cermak will go on a trip to recuperate from the campaign, the place not yet announced, and to pick the remainder of his cabinet. While he is away the departments at the hall will practically be under the supervision of Corporation Counsel Busch and Commissioner Sprague.

Among the reports last night was one that Coroner Herman N. Bundesen may be appointed health commissioner, if he cares to take it. It would involve his retirement as coroner. In case of a vacancy in that office it would be filled by the county board, which is Democratic.

Dr. Bundesen was health commissioner in the Dever regime, and in the recent campaign he retired from the mayoralty race to give Cermak a clear field against Thompson.

Smietanka New Prosecutor.

Corporation Counsel Busch appointed A. M. Smietanka as city prosecutor to succeed Frank Foelix. Mr. Smietanka was defeated Tuesday for the municipal bench by Edward R. Casey, Republican.

Mayor Cermak at a meeting of the Democratic county committee last signed as its chairman. The committee picked P. A. Nash as his successor.

All day long the city hall was packed with crowds lined up to see the new mayor. There was bedlam in the corridors, as Republicans abdicated. Mr. Cermak's office was banked in flowers.

At the council meeting the chamber and galleries were packed, while outside the door a great crowd struggled to worm its way inside. All the big party dignitaries were present, and some of the Republican chiefs who battled against Thompson, among them Judge John Lyle and Thomas O. Wallace, clerk of the Circuit court.

In the absence of Thompson Ald. John S. Clark, chairman of the council finance committee, called the meeting to order. Ald. Jacob M. Arvey, new floor leader, made most of the motions.

Kearns and Brady Inducted.

James A. Kearns, Republican, was inducted into office as city treasurer and Peter J. Brady, Democrat, as city clerk. It was a quick comeback for Mr. Kearns, who in November was defeated for reflection for clerk of the Municipal court.

After the bonds were approved Ald. Clark inducted Mr. Cermak into office as mayor.

"He has been 28 years in public office," said Mr. Clark, "and he was elected Tuesday by the largest majority ever given a candidate for that office. Under him the city is going to get a great administration. In the next four years Chicago will become the greatest city in the world."

Cermak Addresses Council.

Mr. Cermak took the gavel and made his first address as mayor.

"I assume this office with all its responsibilities," he said. "I will never shirk any of them. I have no statement to make at this time, except to reiterate that I am going to give the people of Chicago the best administration they ever had.

"I ask the members of the council for their coöperation to that end. I know the financial dilemma the city is now in.

"The principal reason that hundreds of employés were dismissed today was so that we would be able to function for the balance of the year. The funds in many departments are depleted. I shall do all I can to coördinate departments to eliminate waste and extravagance. I believe that thus in a short time we shall be able to reduce taxes."

The date for the formal inaugural council meeting was set for April 22.

Temporary Appointments Made.

The new mayor announced assignments as heads of departments and bureaus pending permanent appointment. The temporary department heads, mostly ranking civil service men, and the outgoing officials whom they replace, are as follows:

Controller—Victor S. Petterson in place of Charles S. Peterson.

President, board of local improvements—Edward Glackin to succeed Michael J. Faherty.

Woman Zone Board Member Refuses to Quit for Cermak

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Out of the hubbub in the city hall and county building yesterday where the workers in the field waited the shaking of the mayoralty job tree that will loose a harvest of political plums arose soprano strains.

But one at least of the treble voices was raised in remonstrance rather than in admonition. Mrs. Eva Holland Hamilton, chairman of the zoning board of appeals, a Thompson appointee, sent back a declaration of war to Mayor Cermak's notification that her resignation would be accepted.

She Refuses to Resign.

"I haven't resigned; I'm not going to, and you can't put me out," was the tenor of her reply, made both by messenger and later by personal letter.

"I was appointed here to this board for a term of five years by Mayor Thompson in July of 1929," she said. "My appointment was ratified by the city council in accordance with the ordinance governing this department. I propose to serve my full time, till July of 1934, and I cannot be removed except for just cause and after a public hearing."

Mrs. Hamilton was first appointed to the zoning board of appeals in 1927 to fill the unexpired term of Allen B. Pond. She was reappointed in 1929.

Rumors on Board Presidency.

All members of the zoning board received similar notification from Mayor Cermak that their resignations were accepted.

Next in importance to the furor caused by Mrs. Hamilton's attitude against the new mayor were the rumors of the chances of one of the four women members of the county board succeeding to the presidency vacated by Mayor Cermak.

The extensive experience of Mrs. Glenn Plumb in both political and social service fields, of Mrs. Edwin J. Fleming in various phases of civic activities, of Miss Mary McEnerney in the trade union world, and of Miss Amelia Sears as one of the chief executives of Chicago's philanthropic agencies over a period of years were emphasized. Miss Sears was conceded to stand the best chance of the four to get support sufficient to elect her.

Chief interest on the feminine side in Mayor Cermak's appointments to city offices concentrates on the position of commissioner of public welfare. The office is now occupied by Mrs. Anna L. Smith, one of the most active campaigners in the Thompson forces.

Three names prominently mentioned yesterday for this office include two women well known in political circles in the city and a third whose identity is vague except to her co-workers in the social agencies. It was reported from one source that Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank might have the post for the asking. Another report was that Mrs. Elisabeth A. Conkey undoubtedly was slated for the job, while the third put forth the name of Miss Agnes von Driel, head of case work for the sociology department of Loyola university.

Department of Public Service—Dr. Frederick O. Tonney, director of the research laboratories of the Chicago health department, who was exiled to a small laboratory at the contagious disease hospital by Health Commissioner Kegel, was transferred back into the city hall laboratories yesterday after Mayor Cermak took office.

The order returning Dr. Tonney to his civil service duties was one of the first issued by Dr. Hugh O. Jones, who was named acting health commissioner by the new mayor. It is expected that charges filed before the civil service commission last year but never brought to trial will be dropped.

One of the charges lodged against Tonney by the Thompson administration was that he absented himself without leave. Records in the city hall showed that while he was away he was recuperating in a hospital from an illness and had obtained sick leave before going away. Interdepartmental jealousies were credited for the shelving of Dr. Tonney.

EXILE GETS JOB BACK.

KILLING LAID TO OLD QUARREL.

A four year old quarrel caused the fatal stabbing on Tuesday of William Lewis, 35 years old, 3608 South Winchester avenue, it was revealed last night by William Girten, 37 years old. Girten told police he and Lewis were drinking and that when the old quarrel was mentioned Lewis seized him. He stabbed Lewis in self-defense, he said.

SPRAGUE, BUSCH HARD AT WORK CLEANING HOUSE

All Parasites in Offices to Be Dismissed.

Mayor Cermak's first two cabinet appointees, Col. Albert A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, and Francis X. Busch, corporation counsel, lost little time yesterday in starting a wholesale cleanup and reorganization of their departments.

Within an hour after his confirmation by the city council Col. Sprague was hard at work supervising the clearing up of the records in his office, going over pay rolls, checking up on recent expenditures, and planning an immediate reconstruction program. Mr. Busch was similarly engaged. Both were at their desks until late last night.

Col. Sprague expressed astonishment at the condition in which he found the affairs of the department of public works as they were left by his Thompson predecessor, Richard W. Wolfe. He promised a "speedy and drastic" overhauling which will result in economy and efficiency.

"I am amazed at the large number of pay rollers in the department, many of them mysteriously hired during the last two months," said Col. Sprague. "My first duty is to save the taxpayers this expense. Henceforth promotion and employment in this office will be on a merit basis. Maximum service at a minimum cost will be my goal.

All Parasites to Go.

"No employé who is faithful to his duties and who actually is needed will be molested," he promised, "but in view of the financial condition of the city and the emphasis which Mayor Cermak has placed on economy all the parasites will have to go."

Commissioner Sprague announced that he will turn his attention at once to the bureau of streets and in particular to the repair of pavements and disposal of garbage, two functions which continually were criticized under the Thompson administration.

One of the first duties of Corporation Counsel Busch was to begin an investigation of all contracts let in all departments within the last few weeks and to see to the revocation of those showing extravagance and waste. He said he also intended today to make a survey of all pending legal matters and to dismiss lawyers and high priced experts who are not needed.

On Job Sixty Days.

"I agreed to take this position for only sixty days, to help Mayor Cermak start his administration, and then I expect to return to my private law practice," Mr. Busch explained. "I propose to have everything shipshape for my successor."

Both of the new cabinet members found themselves handicapped by the physical wreckage of their offices caused by the moving of their predecessors. Files and cabinets were ransacked, desk equipment removed, pictures taken from the walls, and debris scattered everywhere.

CANDIDATES TIED; DRAW LOTS FOR JOB; TIED AGAIN

Benton township in Lake county has a new assessor, chosen by lot. In the election of Tuesday the two candidates for the office, Harold Stock and Arthur S. Yarroll, each polled 342 votes. Yesterday the township clerk, Harold Bergan, went to the lace works in Zion, where both candidates are employed, and suggested they draw for the office. Bits of paper numbered 1 to 25 were placed in a hat and each man was instructed to take three, the addition showing the largest total to determine the winner. A tie was the result of this, and two more numbers were drawn by each. Yarroll won out by a count of 67 to 54.

Accuse Thompson Backers of Intercepting Telegram

A woman operator for a telegraph company and her husband, a Thompson precinct worker, were named in warrants obtained yesterday in the Shakespeare avenue police court charging them with intercepting a political cablegram sent by a Democratic worker and used by Thompson during his campaign. The warrants, sworn out by F. D. Bernke of the Western Union company, name Mrs. Mildred Buckley, 3103 North Springfield avenue, and her husband James. They are scheduled to appear in court this morning. The offense is punishable by a fine of from $300 to $1,000 or a year in jail.

THOMPSON GOES AWAY; PARTY IS A GLOOMY ONE

Only About 50 Join Up for Seaway Trip.

Gloom heavier than yesterday's sodden sky shrouded the departure of former Mayor Thompson's Mississippi river pilgrimage to New Orleans in the interests of the lakes to the gulf waterway. Pre-election announcements had hailed the trip as a second triumphal victory tour.

Scarcely more than twenty of the heralded, "hundreds of leading business and professional men and public officials," departed on the journey to Peru, Ill., where they joined others who had left earlier and boarded the river steamship Cape Girardeau. They were shepherded by Richard W. Wolfe, former commissioner of public works.

Thompson Abandons Party.

Commodore Thompson abandoned the party to make the trip to the boat by automobile. The last minute shift in plans was made in his rooms at the Congress hotel as a committee of his aids, including Michael J. Faherty, former head of the board of local improvements; Samuel A. Ettelson, former corporation counsel, and Ettelson's first assistant, James W. Breen, ruefully contemplated the few reservations at $200 each compared with the vacant cabin space of the steamer.

Word of the mayor's change of plans reached the delegation fifteen minutes before the departure of the train on the Rock Island railroad. The news increased the solemnity of the departure, which had already taken on the aspect of a wake.

Refuse to Oblige Photographers.

Only one car was reserved on the train. As each new arrival followed a porter carrying bags he was greeted with the question, "Where's the gang?" Each gave the same answer, a sad shake of the head. The party refused to pose for photographers.

The contrast between the present trip and that of four years ago with its host of dignitaries on a special train to crowd two river steamers was noted by members of the delegation. Among the missing was Jack Zuta, vice lord and gangster, an invited guest on the triumphal tour of 1927. Zuta was shot to death near Richfield, Wis., last Aug. 1. Revelations of tribute paid by him to politicians and officials were found in his safety deposit box.

The Wet Goods Arrive.

Two minutes before the train left, two men shouldering large brown paper parcels ran along the runway to the car. Several members of the party gingerly relieved them of the bundles. Similar, but smaller bundles had been carried by several members of the party.

"Capone's bouquet of bourbon for the wake," remarked an onlooker.

As the train drew out of the station at 1:35 p. m., members of the party could be seen tearing the parcels open. Photographers waved farewells, which were not returned by the delegation.

Sail Without Thompson.

The party arrived at Peru almost three hours later and boarded the Cape Girardeau. Hundreds of townsfolk gathered at the dock for a glimpse of the defeated mayor. Members of the delegation waited until the last whistle at 7 o'clock for their commodore to join them. He did not appear. The good ship sailed with 47 passengers aboard and the better part of the contents of the brown wrapped parcels.

In Chicago it was reported that Thompson had again altered his plans and was to join the ship early this morning at Peoria with the majority of his cabinet members. The Cape Girardeau arrived at Peoria at 11:30 p. m. It is to proceed on its journey when the former mayor walks up the gangplank.

HUSBAND'S DREAM IS TRUE, HE SAYS; AND SO HE SUES

The story of a dream that came true was told in Superior Judge Michael McKinley's court yesterday by Louis W. Jurs, 46 years old, a law clerk. Jurs was testifying in the $50,000 damage suit he brought against James E. O'Brien, 60 years old, 1528 North Troy street, who he alleges alienated the affections of his wife, Lucie Jurs, 45 years old.

"I came home on the evening of Aug. 20 last and ate a light lunch," Jurs said. "After falling asleep I dreamt that I had come home when my wife hadn't expected me and found her in O'Brien's arms."

The Jurs then lived at 3527 Franklin boulevard and were neighbors of the O'Briens. O'Brien and his wife, who is 70 years old, had recently celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, Jurs said.

The day following the dream, Jurs said, he decided to go home unexpectedly and when he tried to get in the front door he found it was bolted. Going to the back door, he said, he found O'Brien running down the alley to his car.

Eloper Gives J. P. a Bad Check; Police Arrest Him

George W. Besse, 27 yeasr old, of 1220 North State street, erred when he eloped to Waukegan, on March 30. The error was not in eloping, but in giving a $10 check to Justice of the Peace Henry F. Wallenwein for the ceremony. Justice Wallenwein discovered that the check was no good. Detectives seized Besse yesterday in his home, and took him to Waukegan. He furnished a bond, and his hearing was set for April 15. The elopement bride is the former Evangeline McDonough, a film actress of Hollywood.

Court Acts

Miss June Warwick, 28 years old, a singer, directed angry glances at William Wachter, 30 years old, a salesman, when they appeared before Judge Francis Borrelli in the South State street court yesterday. Miss Warwick and Wachter had had another one of the "lovers' quarrels" which have been frequently aired in the courts.

Edward L. Peters, house detective of the Congress hotel, told the judge that he found Wachter and Miss Warwick struggling together in the singer's room in the hotel last Tuesday night. Wachter said Miss Warwick tried to hit him with an ash tray and that he was restraining her. An alleged stabbing by the singer caused Wachter to sue her for $50,000 a year ago.

"She wrote me a love poem Easter Sunday and invited me to come over," Wachter said in explanation of his presence in Miss Warwick's room.

Judge Borelli placed Wachter under a $1,000 peace bond and told him to keep away from Miss Warwick.

Plan 4 Million Dollar Program at Scott Field

Scott Field, Ill., April 9.—(AP)—A copy of plans for a $4,117,000 construction program at Scott field, the army's lighter-than-air base, was received today by the field commander, Lieut. Col. John A. Paegelow, from the war department. It is estimated four years will be required to carry out the plan. The building program will be financed through annual appropriations. Plans provide for accommodations for 1,036 officers and enlisted men, compared with 450 at present. Frame buildings serving at present will be torn down as rapidly as the proposed two story fireproof brick structures are completed.

IDENTIFY BODY FROM CANAL.

PICK COMMITTEE TO REORGANIZE WORK OF COUNCIL

Steering Group Selected at Caucus.

After a gala session in the council chambers where Mayor Cermak and fifty aldermen, twenty-one of whom were elected Tuesday, were inducted into office, the members of the council in an informal caucus selected the committee on committees.

This committee is picked on the basis of one member for each block of ten wards. Membership on the steering committee is regarded as a prize by the aldermen, as the group assigns the aldermen to the working committees and writes the rules of procedure for the council.

Those Named on Committee.

The committee members, their alternates, and the group of wards they represent are as follows:

Sheldon W. Govier [9th], Democrat; alternate, John J. Coughlin [1st], Democrat, Wards 1 to 10.

Thomas A. Doyle [12th], Democrat; alternate, John P. Wilson [11th], Democrat, Wards 11 to 20.

James B. Bowler [25th], Democrat, the chairman; alternate, John Toman [23d], Democrat, Wards 21 to 30.

Frank A. Landmesser [38th], Democrat; alternate, Frank E. Konkowski [31st], Thompson Republican, Wards 31 to 40.

John A. Massen [48th], Deneen Republican; alternate, John J. Hoellen [47th], Republican, Wards 41 to 50.

Only one upset occurred in the selection of the committee. According to reports in the hall Ald. B. A. Cronson [4th] was scheduled to represent the first ten wards, but was shelved for Govier only a short while before the caucus started.

One of the major tasks of the committee will be to fill the chairmanships of five council committees, positions vacated by the defeat of sitting aldermen or by their election to other offices.

Names Are Mentioned.

Early reports in the hall list Ald. John Toman [23d], John J. Hoellen [47th] and Frank A. Sloan [26th] as candidates for chairman of the railway terminals committee. Ald. Dorsey R. Crowe [43d] has been mentioned as chairman of the buildings and zoning committee and Ald William A. Rowan [10th] as leader of the committee on harbors, wharves and bridges.

The gossip in the hall also mentioned Ald. Barnet Hodes [7th], a newcomer, as a candidate for the chairmanship of the harbors committee. It was said that he has been promised the berth in return for voting for Govier for the committee on committees.

Revamping its plans to go to Tucson, Ariz., the members of the steering committee have decided to remain near Mayor Cermak, who is expected to go out of the city for a short rest. The decision was made, it was reported, so that the committee could take advantage of any suggestions that the mayor may have on the committee assignments.

A public hearing on the question of extending aldermanic terms from two years to four will be held this morning in the council chambers, according to an announcement by State Representative Albert J. Mancin. Members of all civic, improvement, and business organizations have been invited to attend the hearing.

OFFICIAL ELECTION COUNT GIVES CERMAK MAJORITY OF 194,257

The official figures on Tuesday's election, made public yesterday in the proclamation of the board of election commissioners, gave Cermak a majority of 194,257 votes over Thompson. The police returns election night gave a 191,916 majority. The proclamation gave the vote as: Cermak, 671,189; Thompson, 476,932. A total of 1,164,492 votes were cast. There were 682,459 men and 472,033 women. The official vote on other candidates was:

City treasurer—Edward J. Kaindl [Dem.], 518,348; James A. Kearns [Rep.], 533,911; Kearns' majority, 65,563.

City clerk—Peter J. Brady [Dem.], 533,181; P. S. Smith [Rep.], 514,172; Brady's majority, 19,009.

Municipal judge—A. M. Smietanka [Dem.], 542,319; Edward B. Casey [Rep.], 564,127; Casey's majority, 21,808.

FIRE CONQUERED NEAR GAS TANKS ON SHIP AT SEA

New York, April 9.—(AP)—Fire which for a time threatened to reach gasoline storage tanks in the hold was conquered by the crew of the Danish freighter Nordhval sixty miles east of Cape Henry, Virginia, late today. The vessel continued on its way to South American ports. The Clyde liner Cherokee, which had stood by ready to take off the Nordhval's crew, steamed toward New York.

A message received at coast guard headquarters here late today corrected a previous wireless report that the crew and one passenger had abandoned the burning Nordhval and had been taken aboard the Cherokee while three coast guard vessels sped to the rescue.

ELINOR SMITH IN ALTITUDE FLIGHT SOARS 32,500 FT.

Unofficially Sets New Woman's Record.

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—Elinor Smith, diminutive Freeport, L. I., aviatrix, went sky climbing above Roosevelt Field again this afternoon and if her favorite altimeter told the truth she succeeded in setting a new altitude record for women flyers. The barograph—one of two carried on the plane—registered 32,500 feet when it was examined after the landing, which tops by more than half a mile the official record of 28,743 feet recently set by Ruth Nichols of Rye, N. Y. The other instrument showed a reading, however, of only 25,500. Both will be sent to Washington for official calibration.

Flies Bellanca Plane.

In her flight this afternoon, Miss Smith flew the Wasp engined Bellanca skyrocket, the same machine she used in her recent try for the record, which came so near ending disastrously when she fainted after her motor had failed 25,000 feet in the air and fell unconscious through nearly 5 miles of space, regaining her senses barely in time to make a landing.

So powerful is the climbing ability of her great Bellanca that it took Miss Smith less than 2 hours to get far enough above the clouds to satisfy herself that she had set a new record, this afternoon. She took off at 4:35 p. m. and by 6:21 was back on the ground again—receiving the congratulations of her friends and well wishers. A throng of about 1,000 was on hand to cheer the plucky aviatrix.

Gets Congratulations from Rival.

Officially to qualify as the new record altitude holder Miss Smith was required to top Miss Nichols' record by 695 feet. Qualified observers at the field said there was little doubt that she had accomplished the feat—with a good safe margin to spare.

Hardly had her machine been rolled back in it shangar when Miss Smith was handed a telegram from her rival, which read:

"Splendid work, Elinor. Records must constantly be broken if commercial aviation is to advance. My best congratulations. RUTH NICHOLS."

Sanitary District Awards Contract for Bridge Work

The sanitary district yesterday awarded the contract for the completion of the substructure of the South Harlem avenue bridge over the drainage canal to Green & Sons company. The contract is for $79,439. The original contractor, the Chicago Foundation company, failed to complete the job after it was three-fourths done. The trustees approved engineers' plans for the construction of a sewer to carry Melrose Park sewage into the sanitary district sewer, avoiding pollution of the Des Plaines river. The work will cost $900.

FEDERAL COUPONS GIVEN

SOLVE MURDER OF VIVIAN GORDON; HOLD EX-CONVICT

Stein Arrested as Killer of Vice Witness.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—The six weeks old mystery of who killed Vivian Gordon, the vice inquiry witness, was declared solved today by a mink coat and a diamond shaped wrist watch, and Harry Stein, small-time racketeer and ex-convict, was charged by the police with the murder of the red haired demimondaine.

Stein, who once before has been accused of strangling a woman, was variously described as Vivian Gordon's sweetheart and as her "business associate." Stein, himself, insists he never saw the Gordon woman.

Four other men were arrested at the same time as Stein, but in different parts of the city. Three were seized as material witnesses and the other was held as a gunman.

The break in the mystery of the murder of the vice case witness, whose strangled body was found in a ditch in Van Cortlandt park on Feb. 26, came several days ago when the five men were placed under surveillance. They were arrested yesterday, but their detention was kept secret.

Questioned in Seclusion.

All last night Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney and his officers questioned the men in a secluded wing of the police college. No one outside knew there had been arrests. Today Mulrooney, obviously jubilant over what he termed a display of "splendid work" by his detectives, announced "there is no longer any Vivian Gordon mystery."

Full details of the charges against Stein and the other men were not divulged. There are at least three other arrests to be made, it was said.

The motive for the murder first was given as robbery, but later in the day this was discounted. Apparently Vivian Gordon was strangled to death because she knew too much about the operations of a ring dealing in stolen securities.

Stein, a slim and dapper fellow in his early thirties, was held without bail on the charge of murder.

Four Others Held.

The others held with him were David Butterman, a jobber upon whose testimony a large share of the case against Stein depends; Samuel Greenbaum, alias Greenberg, known in the underworld as "Greenie"; Morris Levine, alias "Doc," an electrician, and Jack Holdroft, who said he was a former member of the Canadian mounted police and admits he entered this country illegally in 1926.

It is Holdroft who is held on the pistol charge.

The story told by the police is that Stein had been under suspicion for several weeks and that it has been discovered that on the morning Vivian Gordon was murdered Stein took a mink coat, its lining torn out, to a tailor to get an estimate for its value. The coat was said to be the one worn by the Gordon woman.

The police also have found a jeweler to whom Stein submitted for valuation a diamond ring. It corresponds in size and shape to a stone worn by Miss Gordon. They have the name of another jeweler to whom Stein took a diamond shaped wrist watch similar to the one owned by the slain woman.

"Friends" Since 1929.

The connection between Stein and Miss Gordon was traced back to the summer of 1929, when Stein and two of the men now under arrest went to Oslo, Norway, on an "errand." It is alleged they were sent there by the Gordon woman to dispose of several hundred thousand dollars' worth of stolen securities, but Stein says he went on his own to complete a liquor deal.

CAMPAIGN VICTIM

JACKIE CRADDICK.

A small Thompson campaign button was removed late yesterday from the throat of Jackie Craddick, 3 years old, 6228 Greenwood avenue. The child swallowed the emblem Wednesday, and was taken to the county hospital by his parents on orders of Dr. Richard Perritt. X-ray photographs revealed the location of the obstruction, and Dr. Samuel Pearlman extracted it with the aid of an esophagoscope. Jackie confided to his mother and father that he would not take politics so seriously again.

PHONE COMPANY ASKS CHICAGO PLEA REJECTION

Washington, D. C., April 9.—(AP)—The Illinois Bell Telephone company urged the Supreme court in a brief filed today to reject the petition of Chicago, the Illinois commerce commission and Attorney General Carlstrom for permission to bring mandamus proceedings to compel a three judge federal court at Chicago to dismiss the suit brought by the telephone company to prevent commission made rates from taking effect.

The Supreme court recently in reviewing the action of the trial court in holding the commission rates confiscatory sent the case back to the trial court with instructions.

In its brief today the telephone company declared the trial court was clearly following the instructions of the Supreme court in receiving additional evidence required to enable it to make findings of fact declared necessary by the highest court.

Chicago, the commission, and the attorney general, in objecting to the trial court taking additional evidence and insisting that the suit should be dismissed and the impounded money distributed among telephone subscribers who had paid it, was attempting, the telephone company declared, to have the Supreme court command the trial court to set aside its own instructions and to dismiss a suit which it intended to consider and dispose of on its merits as soon as the trial court could gather facts necessary to enable it to act.

100 in Klan Regalia Raid Dixie Trade Unity Meeting

Greenville, S. C., April 9.—(AP)—One hundred men, wearing the regalia of the Ku Klux Klan, tonight broke up a meeting of the Greenville branch of the Trade Unity league. The robed and hooded men entered a hall where the meeting was being held, seized a quantity of what they said was communistic literature, and locked up the building. Most of those in attendance were Negroes, who fled. Six white leaders were told to leave the city.

Engineer Takes Overdose of Sleep Potion; Is Dead

Edmund F. Church, 57 years old, a consulting engineer, died yesterday at his home, 3750 Sheridan road, apparently of an overdose of a sleeping medicine. According to Dr. Paul McDaniels, 3005 Lincoln avenue, Church recovered from an attack of pneumonia only a short time ago and had been taking small doses of the medicine to induce sleep. The physician expressed the opinion that the overdose was accidentally taken.

THE REAL STORY OF FORSYTHE IN LINGLE INQUIRY

Grapevine Brings Word He Is the Slayer.

This is the sixth installment of "The Solution of the Lingle Murder."

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

CHAPTER VII.

Theories. Motives. Clews. A thousand of each, conflicting, improbable, bizarre, insane. Which was the key to the murder mystery? Was any of them the key? This mysterious fellow Lingle, had he so many enemies wanting his death? Were there so many reasons for his murder?

In the beginning Roche and Rathbun, with many others involved in the investigation, had a feeling that the identity of the killer of Lingle would be exposed through one of two sources. One was that a woman, a gangster's moll, perhaps, might be scorned and in spite reveal the plot.

The other source was the "grapevine," that intangible line of communication reaching from one furtive whisper in gangland, from mouth to mouth until a murmur strikes the ear of the authorities.

Consequently, when the first murmur from the grapevine was heard, a thrill quickened the hearts of the investigators. It came early, within a week after the murder, and it was more than a murmur. It was almost a stage whisper, heard by several agencies of the law.

Roche heard it. It came to Stege and Russell, before they left their commands. It came to a captain of police. And to a reporter for THE TRIBUNE.

A check back on the grapevine revealed that the tip had come from the Capone gang.

Arrest Red Forsythe!

This was the message of the grapevine:

"Arrest Red Forsythe and show him to the witnesses to the murder and they will name him the killer. You can bank on this, absolutely. Red Forsythe killed Jake Lingle."

The information went further. Red Forsythe's first name was James, he was called Jimmy by some; he had an alias, James Fawcett. He was the chauffeur and slugger for Simon J. Gorman, a labor racketeer for years identified with the disorders of the cleaning and dyeing unions. Gorman, so the grapevine had it, was also involved in the murder, and so was Willie Noonan, another of Gorman's "heavy" men.

These men were identified with the north side gang of Bugs Moran and Zuta and the Aiellos. A year before Gorman and Forsythe were arrested, found with weapons concealed about their persons, and they were prosecuted and sentenced by Judge John H. Lyle to serve a year in the House of Correction. Their appeals had been overruled in the upper courts, but they were still at large.

Show Political Influence.

At another time Forsythe was arrested in a police raid upon the loop headquarters of the north side gang, but at that time Forsythe was released when it was found that he was on the pay roll of Corporation Counsel Samuel Ettelson in the city hall.

Gorman was said to have used his two vassals, Forsythe and Noonan, in his attempts to force his way into control of the cleaning and dyeing unions. In this he had the sympathetic aid of the north side gangsters.

The description of Forsythe, tallied in some respects with that of the Lingle killer, as given by the witnesses to the crime. But his hair seemed not to fit at all. The reports were that his hair was a reddish chestnut, and the witnesses to the Lingle murder pictured the slayer as a blond.

Search in Vain for Forsythe.

Still, the witnesses might have been mistaken, or Forsythe might have worn a blond wig. An intensive search was launched.

But not a trace of Forsythe could be found. He had suddenly disappeared from his usual haunts, and so had Gorman and Noonan. This added zest to the chase. If these men had no fears, why had they fled?

A picture of Gorman was found, in a union magazine, but no picture of Forsythe was available, and this was a blow to the investigators. Pictures of both men had been taken in the police bureau of identification at the time of their arrest on the gun toting charge, but they had mysteriously disappeared from the files. Even the original plates were gone. Political influence again.

ROUND UP WITNESSES

While the search for Forsythe was on, Rathbun and Roche rounded up all the persons who could be found who had seen the killing, or who had seen the slayer in flight. Many of them had gone into hiding, afraid for their lives when they learned that the slaying of Lingle had been a gang murder.

From those who could be found, the two directors of the investigation sought to obtain a description, as exact as possible, of the murderer.

At last a composite picture of the killer, drawn from the descriptions of the best witnesses, was prepared, and later a copy of this description was broadcast to police departments, sheriffs and others in all parts of the United States and even in Mexico and in Canada.

The complete description of the Lingle murderer, as it was then drawn, is given here, and its significance, by comparison, shall become evident as this chronicle of the Lingle case approaches its conclusion. The description:

Age—About 21 to 25.
Height, 5 feet 8½ inches to 5 feet 10 inches.
Weight, 150 to 165 pounds, thin build, well proportioned, neat appearance.
Hair—Light hair, brushed back; part indicated in the middle.
Eyes—Somewhat deep set.
Eyebrows—Thin, well lined.
Forehead—Rather high, and of an intellectual cast.
Nose—Regular, almost straight; long; Roman.
Lips—Thin, small.
Chin—Very definite, pointed.
Face—Front, V shaped, angle opening up narrowly to forehead. Might be described as baby faced.

Profile—Regular, handsome.
Neck—Long, not too well developed, yet not weak.
Shoulders—Broad, square, well set up.
Chest—Flat, wide type.
Arms and legs—Moderately long.
Had appearance of senior in college—athletic type.

"Smoky Eyes" Noticed.

Several of the witnesses mentioned his "smoky" eyes, "eyes that seemed to go through and through you." Later, when the killer of Lingle was brought to justice, those cruel smoky eyes were remarked by those who saw him in court.

Other witnesses who had not reported to the police were found or volunteered themselves to the investigators. One of these was Father John Reynolds, a teacher at Notre Dame university, and he revealed himself as the priest who had been at the scene. He had reported to his superiors and they had deemed it not necessary for him to report his observations, but later, when an appeal for witnesses was made, they permitted him to visit Rathbun and Roche, and he told a graphic account of the flight of the slayer, and gave a description almost incredibly accurate.

Another witness who appeared was Albert W. Keifstrom, buyer for the Taylor Trunk company at 23 East Randolph street, near Wabash avenue, and he disclosed for the first time that the slayer had entered the trunk store immediately after the murder. The killer was pale from the stress of his escape, and he purchased a woman's bag for $5 and then left without it, saying he would return. But he never did. He inquired for the men's washroom and slipped away from it, unnoticed, through a rear door.

From other witnesses there came the information that Lingle might have been forewarned, that he lived in fear of the fate that eventually befell him.

At one time Lingle was walking from the Tribune Tower toward the loop, accompanied by another reporter. On this occasion, interrupting a conversation, Lingle abruptly left the sidewalk, jumped into a passing taxicab and was driven away, leaving the reporter standing on the sidewalk.

Lingle's chauffeur was closely questioned by Prosecutor Rathbun as to whether his employer had shown any signs of fear. The chauffeur declared that he and Lingle had often driven far into the country at night, without Lingle showing any signs of fear.

That the reporter manifested queer traits was undenied, but his closest friends set them down to a quirk in his personality, and paid little heed.

CAPTURE OF FOSTER

On June 20, Rathbun and Roche received information that Frank Foster, identified as the purchaser of the weapon with which Lingle was slain, might be found in Los Angeles. They learned that he had ordered a number of tailored shirts from a haberdasher in New York and obtained the address in Los Angeles to which the shirts were to be shipped, under the name "Frank Foreman."

Three detectives from Roche's staff were directed to take the first train for Los Angeles, and here came one of the first proofs that without special funds the Lingle inquiry could not long have endured. The state's attorney had no money with which to send detectives to the Pacific coast, but it was made available by THE TRIBUNE, as were funds for other expeditions found necessary in connection with the investigation.

In Los Angeles, Roche's detectives established contacts with the police of that city and a watch was put on the address to which the package of shirts had been consigned. This was found to be an apartment near West Lake park.

No glimpse of Foster was caught by the investigators, however, but after a week of waiting they decided to raid the apartment, and they did so, early on the morning of June 30.

Foster was not there. His wife was home, and although at first she denied her identity, the detectives were satisfied she was the gangster's wife. She was taken to a downtown hotel and held there.

Meanwhile the detectives hid themselves in the "Foreman" apartment.

After a wait of several hours steps sounded in the hall outside, and voices. A key turned in the lock, the door swung inward, and in a trice Foster was under arrest.

Foster declined to come to Chicago voluntarily.

"I'm a goat," he told the detectives. "I think the gun they mean is one taken away from me by a Chicago policeman."

Refuses to Explain.

Back in Chicago, apprised of all the developments in Los Angeles, Rathbun and Roche were confronted with the problem of how they should proceed. The proof against Foster then consisted solely of evidence that he had two years previously purchased the revolver with which Lingle was murdered. This was a strong circumstance, and Foster must be made to explain it. But he refused to explain it.

Rathbun was loath to seek an indictment for Foster, because he foresaw difficulties ahead if it should develop that he would be forced to dismiss the charge. After lengthy discussion of all the matters involved it was decided to seek the indictment and to extradite Foster.

"There will be a howl if we elect not to try the Foster indictment," Rathbun said. "But we will have to face it. Undoubtedly there would be a worse howl if we turned him loose in Los Angeles."

So Coroner Bundesen and Peter Von Frantzius, the "armorer" of gangland, who had sold the Lingle case gun to Foster, were taken before the grand jury, and the jurors, apprised of the situation, indicted Foster for the murder of Lingle. Assistant State's Attorney Q. J. Chott, habeas corpus and extradition expert of the prosecutor's office, prepared the papers, and before night the request of the state of Illinois to the state of California for the custody of Frankie Foster was speeding westward. On July 6 the extradition writ was received by the governor of California.

Foster meanwhile had asserted, and so had his wife, that they had left Chicago on June 6 or 7, before the murder of Lingle. Immediately Roche sent investigators about to seek information concerning Foster and within 24 hours two witnesses were en route to California.

Presents His Alibi.

When on July 15 Foster was taken before the Superior court in Los Angeles, on his application for a writ or habeas corpus to prevent his extradition to Chicago, the gangster testified that he had left Chicago three days before the day of the Lingle murder and that on that day, June 9, he was in the city of Santa Fé, N. M.

Thereupon the Los Angeles prosecutor called Donald H. Wilson to the witness stand. He testified that he was room clerk at the St. Clair hotel in Chicago and that he had seen Foster in the lobby of the hotel on June 11. He pointed out Foster in open court. He was followed to the stand by Miss Mary Micklin, stenographer at the St. Clair hotel, who corroborated Wilson's testimony.

Foster Loses Fight.

The court denied Foster's application and ordered the gangster delivered into the custody of the Chicago detectives. On the following day he was placed on a train bound for Chicago. Three days later Foster was removed from the train at a point several miles from the downtown terminal, and he was taken secretly to a loop hotel, where he was submitted to questioning by Rathbun and Roche.

His claim that the weapon in question had been taken from him by a Chicago policeman was investigated, and it was learned that this gun was a .45 caliber Colt automatic, whereas the fatal weapon in the Lingle case was a .38 caliber Colt revolver.

Foster persistently refused to disclose what had become of the weapon sold to him by Von Frantzius, and eventually he was placed in the county jail.

POLICEMAN RUTHY

Then Foster's attorneys, Harold Levy and Emmett Byrne, appeared before Judge Daniel P. Trude in the Criminal court and asked that their client be admitted to bail pending his trial. A dramatic scene was enacted in court, which was later to prove a handicap to the prosecution, and which also resulted in confusion in the public mind.

Seeking to prove that their client was not the murderer of Lingle, Levy and Byrne called the state's witnesses, and among those called was the traffic policeman, Anthony Ruthy, who had pursued the slayer from the scene of the murder. The defense lawyer, Levy, stood boldly before Ruthy and asked him if he had seen the slayer since the murder. The witness confounded the defense lawyer, and astounded every one else in the courtroom, by replying that Foster, sitting there in the courtroom, was the man he had pursued.

Despite this testimony, Judge Trude announced he would grant the state one more continuance, and that if the state did not proceed with the trial on the next date he would release Foster in $25,000 bail. It was pointed out to Judge Trude that murder is not a bailable offense except when "the proof is not great or the presumption of guilt evident," but the judge persisted.

Rathbun and Roche were convinced that Ruthy was mistaken. They had mistrusted the policeman from the start and were not satisfied with his story of the chase. An investigation had shown that several years before Ruthy had suffered a head injury in an automobile accident and that since that time he had been in an abnormal mental state. In his suit for damages arising from the accident Ruthy's lawyer had presented proof that the policeman had suffered a brain injury and that he was affected with delusions and hallucinations.

It has never been contended at any time by Rathbun and Roche that Foster had fired the shot which killed Lingle, but, through the mistaken testimony of Ruthy, the impression gained ground in the entire community that the prosecutors were claiming Foster was the actual slayer. Months later, when the real slayer was captured, this circumstance created a false doubt concerning the new captive.

Offered Liberty on Bail.

Foster's case is still pending at this writing. He abandoned his plea for release on bail and remained in jail for four months, while his attorneys presented four successive demands for trial. This procedure, under Illinois law, requires the state to proceed at once with the trial or submit to the charge being dismissed.

The trial was begun, the examination of jurors started on Nov. 29, 1930. Prosecutor Rathbun had proposed to Foster's attorneys that the defendant be admitted to bail, and the case continued pending the completion of the state's investigation. At this time Rathbun and Roche had information which to them was heralding the end of their search for the man who had killed Lingle.

At first the defense counsel declined to accept a continuance. The state's attorneys believed Foster's attorneys were playing a bold game, and were under the apprehension that if they forced the state to trial, the state would dismiss the charge.

State Meets Bluff.

But Rathbun was prepared to meet the bluff of the defense. He would not dismiss the case. He was prepared for trial. He directed Prosecutor McShane, his assistant, to proceed with the examination of jurymen. A day in this task was spent and the following morning the defense attorneys came into court and announced they had agreed to accept a continuance.

The case is still pending, and the identities of the witnesses who would accuse Foster must be withheld, but the state was prepared to prove, by the testimony of witnesses, that Foster was not only the purchaser of the weapon which killed Lingle, but that he was in the tunnel when Lingle was killed.

One fact should be emphasized for reiteration:

Rathbun and Roche never contended that Foster was the man who fired the shot that killed Lingle. They stated this position, repeatedly, in court and in public statements.

[Another installment will appear tomorrow.]

FIRST SOUGHT IN LINGLE INVESTIGATION

Frank Foster, who was arrested in Los Angeles and brought back to Chicago.

PROSECUTORS' WORK IN BROTHERS TRIAL PRAISED BY LEWIS

State's Attorney Swanson yesterday received a letter of congratulation from Senator James Hamilton Lewis on the manner in which the assistant prosecutors handled the murder trial of Leo V. Brothers.

"Please let me, the friend of years, beseech you to say to those assistants of yours who so ably directed the procedure of the case just concluded before Judge Sabath, that I send to them expressions of my congratulations and appreciation. I do not speak of the verdict, because I know nothing of the 'evidence or the merits of the respective contentions of fact.' I congratulate these young gentlemen, for they have revived for the bar the respect for advocacy and resuscitated the esteem, long buried, for skillful oratory and master mechanics in the procedure of advocacy and the art of scientific speech in the presentation of cases before a jury."

The Brothers case was prosecuted by Assistant State's Attorneys C. Wayland Brooks, John Holman and Charles Rathbun.

COURT REFUSES BAIL TO BARKER AND SAMMONS

CRIMINAL COURT.
Walter O'Brien, larceny, sentenced to 1 year in the Bridewell by Judge Patty Finnegan.

The Illinois Supreme court yesterday refused to allow bail to James [Pat] Sammons and George [Red] Barker, two gunmen and labor racketeers, who were sent back to Joliet penitentiary through the efforts of Chief Justice John P. McGoorty of the Criminal court. Both Sammons and Barker were locked up during the drive against criminals last fall on old convictions on which they had been paroled.

Petitions for habeas corpus are pending in the Supreme court and the defendants asked that they be let out of the penitentiary on bail pending a decision of the petitions. Sammons' brother offered to post a substantial real estate bond, but his offer was rejected.

Sammons was sent back to serve 14 years for murder. He originally was sentenced to be executed, but this was commuted to life and later he was paroled. Judge McGoorty held that a parole could not apply to a commuted sentence. Barker's parole on a charge of robbery was also held illegal and he was sent to join Sammons in the penitentiary.

William J. [Three Fingered Jack] White, the third hoodlum leader jailed during the drive last fall, became angered yesterday because he was not granted permission at once to leave the jail to have a tonsil operation. He withdrew his petition. White faces a 14 year sentence to prison following his recent conviction for the murder of a policeman.

DEFICIT GROWS AS GOVERNMENT WASTES MONEY

Efficient Reorganization Is Blocked.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special.]—It looks as if the government would fail to make both ends meet this fiscal year by as much as 800 million dollars or more. How to get the government out of the red is one of the most important problems statesmen confront.

Senators William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho], George W. Norris [Rep., Neb.], and other radicals are demanding an increase of the surtaxes on the incomes of the rich. Senator Hiram Bingham [Rep., Conn.] proposes the taxation of small incomes now exempt. President Hoover and Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon propose borrowing to meet the deficit until business shall improve and produce enough income tax revenues to balance the budget.

But nobody appears to be greatly exercised over the waste and extravagance of the government, the elimination of which, it is estimated, would come pretty close to wiping out the deficit and restoring a surplus. Two decades ago Nelson W. Aldrich said wasteful administration was costing the taxpayers 300 millions a year. But that was in the days of two billion and three billion dollar congresses. The last congress was a ten billion dollar affair.

Recent Methods Are Wasteful.

There has been little reform of the processes and methods of administration since the time of Aldrich. The only material change has been to spend more money in the same old wasteful manner. If, therefore, 300 millions could have been saved by businesslike methods twenty years ago it is probable that 800 millions would be a conservative estimate of the amount that could be saved today.

There are dozens of useless offices and thousands of superfluous employs among the 700,000 in the government service. They are overlapping services and duplication of activities. There are obsolete navy yards and army posts. There are archaic methods of procedure. There is excessive red tape. There are irrigation projects undertaken at the instance of railroads for the purpose of booming their town sites at public expense. There is the Hoover dam to supply water to Los Angeles and the Hetch Hetchy project to supply water to San Francisco.

Aid to States Expensive.

There are a dozen forms of federal aid to states, all tremendously expensive. There are the millions poured out for farm relief, now regarded as a total loss. And there are the floods of literature poured out for the uplift of communities in the backward states, not to mention the floods of propaganda loosed by the government press agents for the purpose of floating the party in power safely to port for another four years.

Then there is the noble experiment of national prohibition, the annual cost of which to the taxpayer exceeds the amount of the deficit the government is facing. In addition to the cost of enforcement, now exceeding 50 million dollars, the annual loss of tax revenue on alcoholic beverages is estimated at more than the 800 millions of the prospective deficit.

A reorganized federal government with all of its activities scientifically grouped and extraneous growths lopped off could be administered at a saving of 250 million dollars, according to an estimate made a few years ago by Senator, now Vice President, Charles Curtis, and by Mr. Hoover when he was secretary of commerce.

Haphazard Government Growth.

The administrative branch of the government represents a haphazard growth of 143 years with virtually no thought given to structural efficiency and economy. Whenever a new agency of administration was needed congress would create a bureau or commission or a department in which existing agencies would be gathered while similar or closely related agencies remained in other departments.

Thus Mr. Hoover once pointed out that 14 bureaus or other agencies in nine departments administered public works construction, eight bureaus in five departments functioned in the conservation of natural resources, five bureaus in two departments gave direct aid to industry, 14 agencies in six departments were concerned with direct aids to the merchant marine, six bureaus in three departments aided education, four bureaus in three departments governed territories and dependencies, and four bureaus in two departments supervised public health.

One Step Toward Reorganization.

At that time there were four bureaus in four departments handling aid to veterans of wars. These are now combined in the veterans' administration, the only step of any moment taken in the direction of reorganization. This consolidation alone effected a saving of more than one million dollars in the cost of administration.

The wastefulness of the present hodge-podge organization of the administrative branch has been recognized for more than forty years and repeated moves have been made to do something about it—without anything ever being done. There was the Cockerell investigation of departmental methods in 1887, the Dockery commission in 1893, Roosevelt's interdepartmental committee in 1905; the Taft commission on economy and efficiency in 1910, and the congressional joint committee on reorganization with Walter F. Brown, now postmaster general as chairman, which President Harding had created in 1921. This most recent body submitteed a scheme of reorganization, but congress ignored it, in fact was distinctly cold to it. Reorganization would legislate out of office thousands of relatives, friends and political retainers of senators and congressmen.

As secretary of commerce Mr. Hoover submitted definite proposals of reorganization to the joint committee and when he became President it was his ambition to achieve the reform. In December, 1929, he urged reorganization in his message to congress, but got nowhere with the matter and has not pressed it since. In his message he pointed out that both parties in 1928 promised reorganization.

"But the presentation of any specific plan," Mr. Hoover continued, "at once enlivens opposition from every official whose authority may be curtailed or who fears his position is imperiled by such result; of bureaus and departments which wish to maintain their authority and activities; of citizens and their organizations who are selfishly interested or who are inspired by fear that their favorite bureau may, in a new setting, be less subject to their influence or more subject to some other influence."

The President said that all administrative activities of the same major purpose should be grouped under a single headed responsibility, that all executive and administrative functions should be separated from boards and commissions and placed under individual responsibility, and that quasi-legislative, quasi-judicial and broadly advisory functions should be removed from individual authority and assigned to boards and commissions.

Mr. Hoover confessed he saw no hope of getting anything done along this line unless congress were willing "to delegate its authority over the problem [subject to defined principles] to the executive, who should act upon approval of a joint committee of congress or with the reservation of power of revision by congress, within some limited period adequate for its consideration."

MILITARY REVOLT SPREADS

President Carmona of Portugal hides in Lisbon military barracks as revolt against his dictatorship spreads from Madeira to the Azores. Two garrisons on the island of San Miguel and at Angra de Heroismo on the island of Terceira have joined the rebellion.

The Lisbon government also fears that the garrison in Angola, Portuguese West Africa, has revolted. The high commissioner of Angola has left for Lisbon and no word has been received from the African colony in the last 24 hours.

Troops sent to Madeira to crush the uprising there are expected to arrive today.

FUNERAL RITES FOR LONGWORTH AT 2 TOMORROW

Hoover and Curtis Will Attend Services.

worth's name "is indelibly inscribed on the pages of our nation's history." Senator James E. Watson [Rep., Ind.], majority leader of the senate, said: "History cannot fail to list him among the great presiding officers of the house." Similar tributes were uttered by Senator Joe T. Robinson [Dem., Ark.], minority leader of the senate; Representative John Q. Tilson [Rep., Conn.], majority leader of the house, and many others of both parties.

On the funeral committee representing the house were placed, among those from the middle west, Representatives Fred Britten [Rep., Ill.], Carl Chindblom [Rep., Ill.], William E. Hull [Rep., Ill.], William R. Wood [Rep., Ind.], Albert H. Vestal [Rep., Ind.], Gilbert Haugen [Rep., Ia.], Earl C. Michener [Rep., Mich.], Carl E. Mapes [Rep., Mich.], John M. Nelson [Rep., Wis.], James A. Frear [Rep., Wis.], and John C. Schafer [Rep., Wis.].

Speculate on Successor.

There was a good deal of discussion of the possible effect of the death of Mr. Longworth on the election of the speaker in the new congress next December. Unless the lineup is changed by deaths of members there presumably will be 218 Republicans, 216 Democrats, and one Farmer-Labor member. The radical Republicans and the Farmer-Laborite will hold the balance of power. They could throw their support to the Democrats and elect John N. Garner of Texas, if they should choose to do so.

Longworth possessed tremendous influence with the radical Republicans despite his intolerance of their irregularity. It was suggested in more than one quarter today that another might not be able to hold them in line for the election of a Republican speaker.

Three Republicans are brought to the fore as contenders for the speakership. They are William R. Wood, chairman of the appropriations committee; John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, the majority leader in the last house, and Bertrand H. Snell of New York, chairman of the rules committee. Mr. Wood probably has a larger following than either of the other two, and stands an excellent chance of being the Republican choice.

Democrats Hope to Win.

Inasmuch as Mr. Longworth was reelected by only 3,500 plurality last November compared with normal Republican pluralities ranging from 18,000 to 30,000, the Democrats have hopes of capturing his district and thereby tying the party strength in the house. Republican leaders said an outspoken Republican will have no trouble in winning the seat in a by-election.

Mrs. Longworth will be urged to become a candidate for her husband's seat. It has become customary for the widows of congressmen to seek election to fill out the unexpired terms of their husbands, and they invariably have succeeded. Some have been reelected to full terms in their own right. There were four widows in the last congress. Mrs. Longworth is famous for her interest in politics, but whether she would be disposed to become a candidate for the house is not known.

VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA

Aiken, S. C., April 9.—[Special.]—Nichlas Longworth, 61, of Cincinnati, for six years speaker of the United States house of representatives, died at 10:52 o'clock this morning at the winter home in Aiken of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Curtis of Washington, D. C., after he had fought for life for three days against lobar pneumonia which developed Monday night from a cold contracted several weeks ago.

The former Alice Roosevelt, daughter of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, to whom Mr. Longworth was married, had arrived in Aiken Wednesday after having been summoned the previous day when doctors realized the serious condition of their distinguished patient. She was not called into the room. Present when death came were only the doctors and nurses.

Lapses Into Coma.

Mr. Longworth had lapsed into a state of coma during the early hours of the morning and his life had been despaired of, death having been expected momentarily for some time before the end did come. The doctors said that only a combination of oxygen and an amazing vitality kept the speaker alive last night.

Joining their bereaved sister this afternoon were Archibald and Kermit Roosevelt, who arrived here at 5:30 o'clock from Charleston, S. C., whence they had flown from New York, having left there this morning. They had hoped to reach Aiken before their brother-in-law passed away, having been called Wednesday night when his condition suddenly became critical.

Word came from Porto Rico that Mrs. Longworth's oldest brother, Theodore Roosevelt, will not be able to reach this country in time for the funeral.

Special Funeral Train.

It has been decided by Mrs. Longworth that the body will be sent direct to Cincinnati, for which place the funeral party will leave tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock from Aiken aboard a private car furnished by Charles W. Clark of New York, wealthy copper magnate and Aiken winter resident, as a part of a special train furnished by the United States government.

Mrs. Longworth bore the blow of sudden widowhood with the stamina and courage for which she had been noted. It was she who took charge of arrangements and decided against a state funeral.

The mayor of Aiken has issued a proclamation calling on all places of business to close for one hour prior to the departure of the funeral train tomorrow morning.

Besides his widow and daughter Mr. Longworth is survived by two sisters, Countess De Chambrun, Paris, and Mrs. Nanny Wallingford, Cincinnati, and an aunt, Mrs. Bellamy Storer, Paris, whose husband was appointed ambassador to Austria-Hungary by President Roosevelt.

Nicholas Longworth Born an Aristocrat Yet Most Democratic; Outstanding Leader

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special.]—With the death of Nicholas Longworth there has passed a man who served with distinction as the speaker of the house in three congresses, who was one of the outstanding leaders in the Republican party, and who for 28 years was a figure of prominence in the national capital.

Married in the White House to Alice Roosevelt, daughter of President Roosevelt, he linked the era of the strenuous life with the age of the noble experiment without being a devotee of either one or the other.

Nick, as he was affectionately known to everybody from the President to the reporters in the press gallery, was a strange mixture of contrasts. To begin with, he was an aristocrat, member of a family of great wealth, connected by marriage with the European nobility, in whose drawing rooms he was at home.

Prince of Mixers.

In the drawing rooms of Washington he always was the gentleman of faultless dress and manner. But none there was more democratic nor who could fraternize in greater good fellowship with the roughest roughnecks of the political highways and byways. He was a prince of good mixers, a wit of renown, whose repartee sparkled in debate on the floor of the house and the best of all story tellers in the recesses of the cloakrooms.

That was the Longworth of the lighter vein, but there was the serious side which brought him steady advancement in congress until he became the head of one of the three coordinate branches of government. While not a brilliant man, he possessed marked ability. He had good judgment and lots of common sense, which he brought to bear on legislation with persuasive force.

Many Democratic Friends.

Illuminating of the character of the man is the fact that he had about as many friends on the Democratic as on the Republican side of the chamber. He had the reputation of being meticulously fair in his parliamentary rulings. No Democrat ever was heard to complain of unfairness on the part of the speaker. Only once was one of his decisions overruled by the house, and that was a matter on which the house later reversed itself and upheld his original ruling.

Longworth, who was 61 years old last Nov. 5, was graduated from Harvard in 1891 and admitted to the bar three years later. As a young man of wealth, however, it was unnecessary for him to earn a living, and he never took more than a languid interest in the law as a profession. He early turned to politics for a career, serving first as a state representative and later as a state senator in the Ohio legislature from the Cincinnati district.

First Elected in 1902.

In 1902 he was elected to the national house of representatives and came to Washington the following year when the Roosevelt administration was barely two years old and Princess Alice, the President's daughter, an interesting young woman with many of her father's traits, was a prominent figure in the limelight's glare. The White House was infested with suitors, mostly young men of her own age, and the whole country was wondering who would be the lucky one to win her. Longworth met Miss Roosevelt soon after coming to Washington, but he was considerably older than she and was not looked upon as a potential suitor. Then there came the tour of a congressional party to the Philippines to study the new possessions, in which the insurrection had just been quelled. Longworth was a member of the party and Miss Roosevelt was invited and accepted.

When the party returned it transpired that Longworth had courted and won Princess Alice beneath the tropic moon. Their engagement was announced and they were married in the White House Feb. 17, 1906. Last February they celebrated their silver wedding anniversary with a dinner at which they and their guests wore the costumes of 25 years ago. The only child of Mr. and Mrs. Longworth was born in 1925.

Doesn't Follow Bull Moose.

Longworth was reelected to successive congresses until 1912, when his redoubtable father-in-law went off the party reservation and became the Bull Moose candidate for President. The son-in-law did not follow. He was too conservative and dyed in the wool regular. He stuck by his fellow townsman, Taft, and like so many other regular Republican congressmen, went down with the ship, being succeeded by a Democrat.

After the Progressive storm blew over, however, Longworth came back to congress, having been out only one term. When he died he had served 13 terms, and was fifth from the top of the membership roll in length of service.

Longworth rapidly came to the front as a legislator. He took a prominent part in the debate on tariff bills and other important legislation. He was an orthodox protectionist and a redoubtable defender of that faith. He voted against submission of the 18th amendment, and in voting against the Volstead act he spoke in a vein of prophecy that has been fulfilled.

"We are defining and punishing as crimes," he said, "acts which the 18th amendment does not prohibit, does not refer to in any way. We are vastly exceeding any instructions which could reasonably be construed as having been laid upon us by the American people. We are providing rules of conduct which will take an army of sleuths and millions of money to even attempt to enforce.

"I am sincerely afraid that this bill will not make for a temperate America. I fear that it will act as a stimulation to the business of the moonshiner and the drug peddler. I cannot bring myself to support this measure."

Chosen Floor Leader in 1923.

Longworth was elected Republican floor leader in 1923 and two years later he succeeded Frederick H. Gillett in the speakership. In the Republican caucus his opponent for speaker was the late Martin B. Madden of Chicago. Madden was a veteran of the house and chairman of the powerful appropriations committee. But he never had a chance. The engaging personality and lovable qualities of Nick Longworth had won a following that could not be swerved from its fealty.

About the first thing Longworth did on assuming the speakership was to exile the radical Republicans who had deserted their party and supported La Follette for President in 1924. Backed by the regular Republicans, he threw the insurgents out of their places on committees which they had won previously as Republicans. They fumed and breathed denunciation, but not at Longworth. Nobody could hate Nick. Then in the next congress, when the votes of the radicals were needed, he caused the more tractable ones to be restored to favor and all was forgiven.

It was in the last congress that Nick came to his full stature in the speakership. He was in command of a well disciplined Republican majority. As the sheet anchor of the administration and the bulwark of conservatism in the gale of radicalism that swept through the halls of the Seventy-first congress the speaker cut a figure that loomed larger and larger in the political picture. Again the so-called "sons of the wild jackass," with their Democratic allies, rode rough shod over President Hoover in the senate, only to be hurled back from the stone wall of Longworth's Republican regulars in the house.

Capacity for Leadership.

In one after another of these crises for the administration it was a matter of common comment among Republican leaders that the speaker was displaying a signal capacity for leadership as well as political judgment of a character that had been found wanting at the White House.

At the conclusion of the session the Republican members of the house in the next congress met and unanimously chose Longworth as the Republican candidate for speaker.

At noon on the 4th of March Longworth tapped his gavel the last time, declared the Seventy-first congress adjourned sine die, and, though he little suspected it, brought his own public career to a close. It was his last appearance on the stage of the drama in which he had been a leading actor.

The last scene was one that will live in the memory of the 435 members of the house and their families and friends as the memento of the man who was Nick Longworth. There had been the closing tributes of friends and foes to the fairness of the speaker. There had been tears in the eyes of men as they touched upon the affection he inspired. Then a piano was rolled into the chamber of the house, and Nick, descending from the speaker's dais, seated himself on the stool and swept the keys. Musician that he was, for he played the violin as well as the piano, Nick struck up one tune after another and the house joined in until the singing ended with "Auld Lang Syne."

MINNESOTA DOCTOR DEVELOPS VACCINE TO CURE RHEUMATISM

Minneapolis, Minn., April 9.—(AP)—Dr. Benjamin J. Clawson, of the University of Minnesota Medical School, today announced he is experimenting with a vaccine destined for treatment of rheumatism in human beings.

"I have enjoyed marked success in experiments on animals suffering with rheumatic fever," the medical school professor said. "By vaccination I have ascertained means of preventing its high incidence in animal life."

Hundreds of human patients, he said, have been given treatment although the vaccine will not be in general use until tests prove conclusively it is successful.

In making the vaccine, he takes the causative organism, which he has isolated from the blood of patients having acute and chronic arthritis, and instead of injecting the vaccine under the skin as is usual he injects it directly into the blood stream.

Postpone Gridiron Dinner in Respect to Longworth

Washington, D. C., April 9.—(AP)—The Gridiron club, with which Nicholas Longworth had met on many festive occasions, tonight postponed its spring dinner out of respect for his memory. The dinner of the club, an organization of Washington correspondents, was to have been held next Saturday night, with Speaker Longworth and many other public men as guests. It will be held instead on Monday evening, April 27.

GARNER MOURNS PARTISAN ENEMY, PERSONAL FRIEND

Pays Highest Tribute to Longworth.

Uvalde, Tex., April 9.—(AP)—Of the multitude who mourned the death of Nicholas Longworth, none grieved more deeply tonight than his chief political foe, but fast personal friend, Representative John M. Garner, Democratic leader of the house.

JOHN M. GARNER. (© Harris & Ewing.)

Intense partisans and with widely divergent backgrounds, these two political rivals maintained through years of legislative battling a personal intimacy with few parallels in American politics.

"I have lost one of the best friends of a lifetime, the country a good citizen and the congress a most valuable legislator," Representative Garner said.

Mr. Garner said he would attend the Longworth funeral in Cincinnati.

He spoke with feeling of his association with Mr. Longworth since the days both were young congressmen, and recounted that many a law now on the statute books had been smoothed out in personal conferences between them which were a daily habit. Both traveled much the same road to the leadership of their representative parties in the house, serving together on the important foreign affairs and ways and means committees.

In Washington numerous public men, including members of the cabinet, united yesterday in paying tribute to Mr. Longworth.

PNEUMONIA KILLS 3 SISTERS.

Dugger, Ind., April 9.—[Special.]—With the death here of Mrs. Sadie Durger today, pneumonia has resulted in deaths of three sisters in five days. Mrs. Lydia Edmondson and Mrs. Julia Ferris, sisters of Mrs. Durger, died only four hours apart at Worthington.

PRESIDENT AND WIFE SEND CONDOLENCES TO MRS. LONGWORTH

Aiken, S. C., April 9.—(AP)—Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, widow of the speaker of the national house, received the following telegram from President Hoover, expressing his sympathy and that of Mrs. Hoover over the death of Mr. Longworth here today:

"The White House, Washington, April 9.

"Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, care James F. Curtis, Aiken, S. C.

"My dear Mrs. Longworth: I am profoundly grieved to learn of the passing of your husband and wish you to know how deeply Mrs. Hoover and I sympathize with you in your bereavement. He was endeared to the whole people by his charm and graciousness and his distinguished public service entitled him to the honors which he bore so modestly and yet so worthily. He will be mourned by the nation and long held in their affectionate and grateful memory.

"Yours faithfully,

"HERBERT HOOVER."

MELBA, FAMOUS OPERA SINGER, LEAVES MILLION

$40,000 Set Aside for New Prima Donna.

(Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.)

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 9.—One of the outstanding bequests in the will of Dame Nellie Melba, published today, is a gift of $40,000 to the Albert street conservatorium in Melbourne, the city from which the great singer took her name, "in the hope that another Melba may arise."

The estate of the prima donna, who died on Feb. 23 after a long illness of typhoid fever contracted in England, has been proved at about $1,000,000, much smaller than expected. Dame Nellie suffered great losses during the world war when her German and Austrian investments were wiped out. Recently her speculations in Australia proved disastrous.

Family Shares Estate.

The residuary beneficiaries are the singer's only child, George Armstrong; her daughter-in-law and her 12 year old granddaughter, Pamela Armstrong. Dame Nellie's jewelry, valued at $70,000, including many gifts from royalty, is also left to Pamela, and, in the event of ultimate failure of the residuary income to take the direction the will provides, that income from the residuary estate shall be devoted to promoting music in Victoria. At least a quarter of the estate is represented by investments in the United States.

Flute Player Receives $1,250.

An annuity of $1,250 is left to John Lemmone, who played the flute at Dame Nellie's first important concert. Among many other legacies are those to the Melbourne Children's hospital, $5,000; Lord and Lady William Neville, $5,000; Bernard Rolt, composer, $5,000; the Melba kindergarten in the suburb of Melbourne, where Dame Nellie was born, $2,500, and her nephew, Gerald Patterson, Australian international lawn tennis player, $2,000.

The singer's dying wish was that she should be buried beside her father in Melbourne, and this was done.

IDENTIFY RIVER VICTIM.

Moline, Ill., April 9.—(AP)—Officials of the East Moline State hospital today identified the body found in the Mississippi river near Bettendorf, Ia., Tuesday as that of Edward Hedrich, 56, of Peoria, who had been missing since Jan. 13.

DIVORCE GIVEN TO MRS. LUDEN, WIFE OF ACTOR

Los Angeles, Cal., April 9.—[Special.]—Judge Joseph Sproul today decided against Jack Luden, movie actor, son of an eastern cough drop manufacturer, and granted Mrs. Elisabeth Luden, newspaper reporter, a divorce decree.

Mrs. Luden testified concerning her husband's charges of intoxication and indiscretion. "The boys used to drop in at our house," she said, "and things often got convivial. But they were his friends, not mine."

In handing down his decision Judge Sproul cut Mrs. Luden's alimony from $100 a week to $25 a week, terminating in two years. He said: "This is a case of too much liquor. Both went to parties and did things they would not have done otherwise. But I exonerate both of habitual intemperance. Decree granted on charges of cruelty."

Chicagoan Sentenced to Prison on Forgery Charge

Richmond, Ind., April 9.—(AP)—Harry E. Turner, Chicago, was sentenced today to two to 14 years in prison on his plea of guilty to forgery. Turner was arrested at Logansport last week after an automobile accident here in which his companion, Thomas Murray, Chicago, was killed. Police said Turner admitted he and Murray had passed several fraudulent checks in Indiana and Ohio cities.

MARY GARDEN RECOVERS FROM COLD AND SINGS

(Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.)

MONACO, April 9.—Mary Garden gave proof of quick recovery from a cold contracted earlier in the week by singing "Tosca" at the Monte Carlo opera tonight.

While singing at the kermesse charity fête here Tuesday night Miss Garden became so ill that she was unable to reappear on the stage after the end of the second act. She took to her bed in the villa she has owned at Baille for many years and where she passes a vacation of several months every year.

She declared she was feeling fine again after tonight's performance.

Norwalk, Conn., April 9.—(AP)—Marcia Nash Healy, musical comedy star of the Pacific coast, and sister of Ted Healy, Broadway comedian, was married today to Frank Kaftal, New York manufacturer, in the office of Justice of Peace Frederick F. JAPAN'S PREMIER SHOT BY YOUTH OPERATED UPON

TOKIO, April 10 [Friday.]—(AP)—Premier Yuko Hamaguchi had a fair night after submitting to a second abdominal operation within a week last night. Physicians said "his condition is not alarming."

A majority of the vernacular newspapers asserted Hamaguchi's resignation was imminent, although the independent Nichi Nichi contended the premier will cling to his post, for the present at least, to prevent a cabinet crisis which might enable the Seiyukai party to gain power.

The operations resulted from the wounding of the premier last November by a misguided youth. The first operation was performed last Sunday. The premier is 60 years old. Seiyukai party leaders and other political opponents continued their clamor that Hamaguchi yield his post to some one physically able to act as premier.

PUGILIST GUILTY AS GIRL'S SLAYER TO DIE IN CHAIR

Louisville, Ky., April 9.—(AP)—George W. [Newt] McCasland, Jeffersonville, Ind., former pugilist, was sentenced to death in the electric chair late tonight by a jury that deliberated less than an hour. He was convicted of the murder of Miss Mildred Meyer, 24, fatally shot on the front porch of a residence here the night of Jan. 21.

The defendant testified he and Miss Meyer were automobile riding and she asked to be taken to the residence where Donald Huck, 24, and Gordon C. Keath, 23, both of Chicago, were staying. When he knocked on the door, he said, Huck and Keath jumped out and began a fight and he heard a shot fired.

Huck and Keath, who were released at the examining trial, testified they were awakened by McCasland pounding on their door, and said McCasland started the fight, during which a gun was discharged. It was not until several minutes later, they said, that the body of the girl was found on the porch. Patrolman William Fulton testified the bullet that killed the girl was fired from McCasland's pistol.

Huck is a son of Mrs. Winifred Mason Huck, former Illinois congresswoman.

EX-RAIL CLERK TELLS HOW RUM IS SMUGGLED IN

Buffalo, N. Y., April 9.—(AP)—John F. Callaghan, former chief billing clerk of the Canadian National railways at Black Rock, today told a federal jury his story of a system by which, he said, freight carloads of liquor were brought from Canada into this country without being inspected by customs officers.

Gallaghan was one of 21 persons indicted for conspiracy in connection with an alleged gigantic smuggling system. He pleaded guilty and today was a witness for the prosecution in the trial of four men alleged to have been involved in the same conspiracy.

Callaghan testified that in falsifying railroad records and bills of lading he acted under instruction from Harry Fineberg of Toronto. He said he was paid $250 for each car that crossed the international boundary safely through his efforts.

In its outline of the case yesterday the government charged that carloads of liquor were shipped across the border, consigned to various well known rubber companies in this country. Once on American soil the billing of the cars was changed and they were shipped to another point.

Invalid Minister Moves Without Leaving His Bed

Middletown, N. Y., April 9.—(AP)—The Rev. A. A. Martin, for years a Presbyterian pastor here, ill in bed, began a journey to Illinois today, bed and all. He was placed aboard an express car for Freeport, where a daughter is night superintendent of a hospital. Mr. Martin recently offered his resignation on account of his health.

FRANCE DEFENDS RIGHT TO LARGE MILITARY FORCE

Doumergue Sees Danger in Austro-German Pact.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, April 9.—At Nice today President Doumergue, who is on his way to make an official visit to Tunisia, made one of those speeches which comes as near to outlining national policy as a president of the French republic is ever permitted by the constitution to go. In one passage he made this statement:

"France has the right to think that, so long as the league of nations does not have at its disposition sufficient military force to impose execution of its decisions on those who may not be disposed voluntarily to submit, she must remain on her guard and count greatly on herself.

Refers to Austro-German Pact.

"She has more right to think this way, for she has just recently found herself in the presence of an unannounced event whose importance in the present and whose consequences for the future should not be misunderstood, for the history of the country, where it has happened, shows precedents full of warning which it should be dangerous for us to forget."

This was in reference to the proposed Austro-German customs.

President Doumergue was speaking at a banquet given in the Palais de la Mediterranee, a great casino built on the sea front by Frank Jay Gould. He began with a graceful reference to Italy, recalling Italy's share in the war. Then came a passage:

"Our patriotism is aggressive. It is dangerous for no one. It does not seek to elevate France above other nations and impose hegemony. It seeks only to keep the place to which it has a right, that independence which is essential to it, that full security which is indispensable if it is to work fruitfully for the development of peace and collaborate in the fullest manner in the progress and happiness of humanity."

Tour Last Official Act.

Within six weeks Doumergue's seven years of office will come to an end. This tour will be his last official act. In today's speech he twice made reference to the necessity of an international army.

"It is only good sense," he said, "that so long as France is exposed to cruel surprises, so long as a solid international force has not been organized, she must not allow herself to be led into a reduction of her own material force below the limit essential for the needs of her security and integrity, her metropolitan and colonial domain, for which the present generation is accountable unto the next."

MAN SWALLOWS TEASPOON WHILE VIEWING THROAT

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—Abraham Levitt, 28 years old, is in the Beekman Street hospital, where he was taken this afternoon after swallowing a teaspoon with which he was examining his throat.

The spoon is lodged about two-thirds of the way down his throat and unless doctors can extract it through his mouth, Levitt must undergo an operation for its removal.

Levitt apparently became frantic when unable to remove the spoon by his own efforts and staggered to the sidewalk in front of his small watch repair shop on Ann street. Passersby called a policeman who summoned an ambulance, when Levitt became unconscious.

SECRET ESCAPE TUNNELS FOUND IN LIQUOR RAIDS

Jury Police Active in Des Plaines District.

Secret tunnels, apparently designed as avenues of escape, were discovered by state's attorney's police and federal dry agents in two liquor raids in the city and county yesterday.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles Lounsbury led the police squad working for the special grand jury, which is investigating police corruption, in a raid on the Sea Food restaurant, 586 West Madison street. Harry Freeman was seized as the proprietor and an employé who gave his name as Samuel Offenbeck also was arrested.

Secret Tunnel Found.

In a concrete vault in the basement, the face of which had been designed to appear as a part of the wall, the raiders found 35 gallons of moonshine. Sergt. Michael Ahern then discovered the entrance to the tunnel, which was a concrete door revolving on an axis. The passageway led out into Madison street and had its outlet three doors to the east, at 580 West Madison, where the raiders found a stock of empty barrels.

The grand jury police also raided a speakeasy flat at 1225 Fletcher street, where Joseph Spalezzi was seized as proprietor and 25 pints of whisky were confiscated. A waiter named by Spalezzi, Joseph Mule, was being sought. The raiders said Spalezzi sold drinks to customers in an adjoining flat occupied by Mrs. Mary Gibbons.

In Capt. Gill's District.

Both these raids were in the Des Plaines street police district, where Capt. Richard Gill was ordered by the grand jury to close up booze and gambling dives. Capt. Gill was consigned to the Siberia detail by Acting Police Commissioner Alcock the day before the election and restored to his command the day after.

It was explained yesterday that the special activity in the Des Plaines street district was based on information that the vice, booze traffic and gambling there is controlled by a syndicate headed by Dago Lawrence Mangano, Capone hoodlum and public enemy.

Other Places Raided.

Capt. Gill's men raided a place at 415 South Halsted street and arrested Morris Gold, the alleged owner, and eight others. At 14 North Racine avenue Leo Decchio, keeper, and four patrons were taken into custody. The police reported that liquor was found in each place.

The second get away tunnel which did not serve its purpose was found by dry agents leading from the house to the garage of Tony Barone, 604 South Forsythe avenue, Calumet City. Barone was caught in his house tending a 1,500 gallon recooking alcohol still. The federal agents also raided four saloons and arrested three men in Calumet City, being the fourth foray made there in six weeks. The agents are working up a booze conspiracy case.

ZEPPELIN OFF ON EGYPT FLIGHT; CAIRO FIRST STOP

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, April 9.—With 25 passengers aboard, including Commander R. S. Booth, who piloted the British R-100 to Canada and back last year, the Graf Zeppelin took off early today for Cairo, Egypt. Dr. Hugo Eckener is in command.

Before the airship left the crew collected cameras from passengers as the result of the French government's order that no photographs be made of French territory. Flying down the Rhone valley, the Graf Zeppelin passed over Marseilles and on to Corsica. She was last reported over Messina.

CONTEST BOARD AAA CERTIFIED TEST

Emblem of Contest Board of American Automobile Assn.

Conducted by Contest Board of A. A. A. on Indianapolis Speedway

FOR MORE than 3 weeks, 13 cars of prominent makes whirled around the Indianapolis Speedway in probably the most thorough and comprehensive lubrication study ever made. Day and night the work went on. Relays of drivers rolled up a total mileage for all cars exceeding 100,000 miles.

The Contest Board of the American Automobile Association conducted this work and is compiling the results for certification. The records involve almost 1,000,000 calculations. Close to 100 men were employed on this project. Its broad scope and thoroughness attracted wide attention. Car manufacturers sent representatives to the track for observation.

Here are some of the technical questions included in this elaborate lubrication study:

1 Extent to which motor oil thins out in the crankcase?

2 Effect of speed on oil consumption?

3 Volume of carbon formed with various grades (viscosities) of oil at different speeds?

4 Engine wear at known speeds with various grades of motor oil?

Soon these cars will take to the road on extensive individual tours. These tours will serve a dual purpose. First, to deliver to automobile dealers the certified results of the lubrication study and give them the privilege of inspecting their car. Second, to carry on the lubrication study under the identical conditions that your car faces every day. Watch for these cars.

The broad scope and thoroughness of this work explains why Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is able to provide you with motor oil that meets exactly the lubricating requirements of your car.

EMMERSON THINKS IT OVER.

Legislators who supported the repeal of the Illinois prohibition act have asked Gov. Emmerson for a hearing before he decides his own course in the matter. The repealer is before him. He may sign it, veto it or allow it to become effective without his signature. The attorney general has examined it and found it in constitutional form. It is not defective.

The governor, it is reported, is under pressure to veto the act. The prohibitionists who were defeated in the Republican state convention, in the state referendum, and in the general assembly are trying to save themselves and their enforcement law by coercing the executive. The state convention declared the intention of the party to accept the result of the referendum. The party pledged its officers and its candidates to this. Mr. Emmerson, a delegate in the convention, opposed the adoption of the resolution, but when a majority had passed it he accepted it. He did not bolt on this question. He did not say that personally he could not be bound by it. When the question had been decided he accepted the result.

This commitment of the party and its responsible persons to the popular decision gave particular quality to the referendum under the public policy act. It was an announcement in advance that the vote would be regarded as more than advisory. It would be accepted as decisive. Republican members of the legislature could take their instructions as coming from their districts, but the Republican state officials were pledged to the state vote. If this pledge is disregarded the party convention becomes nothing but a worthless assemblage of double crossing schemers and the deceived voters of the state will have no reason to put any trust in any person involved in the deceit. Gov. Emmerson cannot veto the repeal act and submit himself for renomination as a square shooting governor. A veto would condemn the entire Republican state management in the eyes of a majority of the people of Illinois. If the voters cannot rely upon a pledge in this case they will have reason to doubt the good faith of Republican candidates in everything. It will mean that the next governor will be a Democrat. The Democrats have kept faith.

Illinois has elected a United States senator on this question. Chicago has elected a Democratic mayor. Democrats are everywhere in place of Republicans. The Republican party is distrusted because of its weakness, its subservience to discredited influences and its evasions. If the Illinois Republican management adds bad faith and broken pledges to the record the case is hopeless.

A sophistry urged upon Gov. Emmerson for the veto of the act is in the statement of drys that the state, particularly outside of Chicago, will be unable to handle the disorders of liquor trade because there will be no state law of any kind affecting the sale of intoxicants. That plea is not worth consideration. The Volstead act is as it has been. No community need have any trade in intoxicants which it does not want. The stiffest process under the Volstead act applies the old rule for the abatement of a nuisance, permitting padlocking for contempt of court, punishment without trial by jury. Even without federal assistance the communities can abate nuisances under state law. No downstate locality will have any liquor trade unless it is protected or ignored or encouraged.

State enforcement has been notable only for murder and graft. It caused the murder of a woman in Kane county and the murder of a service man in Winnebago. It has produced petty graft and larger extortions. It has given opportunities to corrupt police, gyps among the rural authorities and stool pigeons. The state enforcement act has nothing to its credit and a great deal to its discredit. It's only been a cloak for big and little rascalities.

If Gov. Emmerson vetoes it he caves in to a coercive minority, goes back on the party pledge, ignores the popular vote, sets himself against a majority in both houses of the assembly and in the electorate, denies Illinois its proper place among the states working for a modification of liquor laws and probably ruins the Republican party here.

A NEW RIFLE FOR THE AMERICAN SOLDIER.

An army board is going to run a series of tests of semi-automatic shoulder rifles this summer. The present rifle carried by the American soldier is the one used in the war eleven years ago. As firearms go it is antiquated. Its place is in the museums along with the Krag of 1898 and the civil war carbine. Indeed, the present rifle was antiquated in 1918, as every one knew who was familiar with progress in firearms.

With the present rifle it is necessary to operate the bolt action after each shot. Accordingly the target is lost after each shot and the rifle must be aimed anew. As long ago as 1590 the sporting goods houses were selling a gun which automatically ejected the empty shell and slipped a new one into place. The objection to this type of weapon for military service, as stated by ordnance officers, has been that it is likely to become fouled with dirt and is therefore unreliable. The objection had considerable force in the early days of the automatic rifle, but in the forty years which have elapsed the designs have been greatly improved. It is reliably stated that the newer automatics are at least as foolproof as the Springfields or Enfields which our soldiers carried in the last war.

Needless to say, as weapons, either the Garand or the Pedersen which the army is now preparing to test is vastly superior to the bolt action gun. Either the trained or the untrained soldier can fire with the automatic more accurately and, of course, more rapidly. With this weapon the disadvantage of the individual soldier and the squad as against the machine gun is considerably lessened. Without it the odds remain what they were in the Argonne.

The army has been unconscionably slow in adopting an automatic weapon. It has always been slow to accept improvements of this sort. Military authorities are convinced today that the north might have shortened the civil war by years if the Union army had been equipped with the best rifle then obtainable. Examples of military backwardness could be multiplied almost indefinitely. They may explain but they do not excuse the hesitation in this matter of the rifle.

MR. CERMAK TAKES OFFICE.

Mr. Cermak's extrance into the city hall has attracted a degree of attention throughout the world which must be unique or nearly so in the history of American municipal politics. His election was reported in virtually every important newspaper in the civilized world, a distinction which many an American President has not enjoyed. The editorial comment, if we may judge from scores of quotations, is universally favorable to him.

It follows that Mr. Cermak has an unexampled opportunity to establish a lasting reputation for himself and to reestablish the good name of the city whose affairs he now directs. He is a marked man and his city is a marked city. Perhaps it is unfortunate for him that there is no general appreciation of the difficulties which confront him. It is certain that many thousands even of his fellow citizens have no proper estimate of the tasks which he faces.

Mr. Cermak, if he is to live up to expectations, must reëstablish the city's finances on a sound basis, a task which might well stagger the most experienced of financiers. He must reorganize the police department for the security of life and property against as well organized and well financed a collection of hoodlums as is to be found in any city in the country. He must reestablish probity and efficiency in governmental departments which have been exploited for private advantage. Everywhere he turns in the city hall he will find the laxity, the degradation of standards of public service, which have been the inevitable result of years of incompetence and misrule. His first task must be to reëstablish morale. And that, as matters stand today in Chicago, is a job which calls for the strongest of leadership.

Mr. Cermak's difficulties will not excuse failure; but they do make his opportunity. Experienced as he is in politics, it is certain that he has not underestimated the task which confronts him. He entered the campaign knowing that the election was only the first and easiest of a series of obstacles which he must overcome. The realization of that fact is the necessary foundation of a successful administration. For the rest, Mr. Cermak enters the mayor's office with a fund of good will on the part of his fellow citizens which few mayors have enjoyed. May he realize the expectations of his constituents!

SPEAKER LONGWORTH.

Nicholas Longworth was one of those public figures in our political history whose personalities have tended to obscure to the casual eye the qualities which in their political career and their official service were the real foundations of their influence and their accomplishment. The sense of humor, the wit and geniality which drew to Nick Longworth the liking and friendship of so many men and women in public and private life were elements of a personal popularity not without its value in public life. But his associates in politics and in congress knew and respected him as a student of public questions, a thorough and industrious legislator, and an able and fair moderator in the great assembly over which he had been called to preside. There was no member of congress who had a more exact and comprehensive knowledge of the enormously complicated subject of the tariff than Longworth, and his part in the organization of responsible legislation and responsible party action was of first rate importance. To the speaker was unquestionably due a good deal of the credit for the salutary check the house applied upon the demoralized senate during the last session when the representatives of a very small section of the nation were dictating action not only inconsistent with Republic policy but with the substantial interests of the American people.

Nicholas Longworth will be missed in the councils of the Republican party and in the arduous work of legislation in congress, where his conservative judgment, fairness, experience and industry had earned him through the years of his service the respect of his colleagues in both parties and a place of increasing influence in responsible legislation and party action.

THE OHIO CONFESSIONS.

[The Peoria Transcript.]

Two prisoners in Ohio state prison at Columbus have admitted they started the fire which claimed the lives of 320 convicts on April 21, 1930. This announcement is made by the county prosecutor at Columbus, who further adds that the men will be tried for murder.

While the alleged confessions by no means relieve the state of Ohio from its responsibility for maintaining a penal institution built of inflammable material, they suggest that many things were said about Warden Preston Thomas and other authorities of the prison which were not supported by the facts.

This is important because of the situation at Stateville and Joliet prisons in Illinois. Rebellious prisoners in the former institution destroyed nearly half a million dollars' worth of property.

Criminals, apparently, are not to be trusted in prison or out.

NATURE'S MILK PRESERVATIVE.

THERE is a substance in milk which preserves it for several hours. If bacteria in a pure state or if dirt containing bacteria are added to milk, the number of these decreases for several hours. Some bacteria are affected more than others. In other words, milk is a natural germicide for a few hours' time. After this germicide period passes the bacteria that survive start increasing and they keep it up until each fifteen drops, roughly, contain many millions. The rate of this multiplication depends on the temperature at which the milk is kept and on some other factors.

This natural germicide goes by the scientific name of lactenin. It is dissolved in the skim rather than in the cream. Furthermore, it is in that part of the skim called the whey rather than in the casein. It is, therefore, not present in any considerable amount in butter, cheese, cottage cheese, or cream. It works in cold milk and also in that which is fairly warm.

It is not harmed by heating to 153 for twenty minutes; it is only partially affected by 158 for that period, and stands heat of 176 for a few seconds. It is found, therefore, in pasteurized though not in boiled milk. Some specimens of dried milk contain it. It should be present in condensed milk and in the evaporated product. The age of the cow does not affect the amount of it contained in her milk. It is not known whether the amount of it can be changed by changing the cow's feed.

Up to the present no way of vaccinating the cow or treating her medically or in any other way has changed the amount of lactenin in her milk. There is nothing known that points toward breeding cows that will give germproof milk. For that matter, nothing indicates that there is a way of making a milk permanently germicidal. This germicidal lactenin is entirely harmless to babies and to calves.

ATHLETIC FOOT.

J. L. G. writes: This is the way I was cured of athlete's foot, or ringworm:

Every night before going to bed I washed my feet thoroughly with soap and water and applied a salve containing salicylic acid, and sold in drug stores, to the toes and soles of my feet. On the fifth and perhaps on the sixth night I used a milder salve—in this case ammoniated mercury ointment—instead of the salicylic ointment, which is strong and makes one's toes sore. After one or two nights of using the milder salve I returned to the other one and continued its use until the small jar was used up, which was after two or three more treatments.

Throughout the week I was careful not to step on the floor with bare feet for fear of being reinfected. However, after the period of doctoring I walked on the floor with bare feet and have never recontracted the disease.

Every morning during the period of treatment I put on a clean pair of socks. I have been free from the disease since last fall.

CAUSES OF FAINTING.

Mrs. G. F. writes: Although my little girl seems of normal weight and strength, yet she frequently faints. She goes to bed early and has a good heart.

1. What could be the cause of this?
2. What foods should be avoided?

REPLY.

1. Among the causes of fainting such as you describe are hysteria or simulation, rapid growth, epilepsy, anemia, heart disease. Have a physician find the cause in this case.
2. It is not probable that food is a factor.

LITIGATION UNWARRANTED.

Chicago, March 27.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A year ago my son sent a check to a firm in Wisconsin to purchase a dog. The firm had advertised extensively years ago but not recently. Upon investigation we find the firm is no longer in business, although the man who handled its correspondence cashed the check, but did not send the dog. Appeal was made to the chief of police in the town, but no action was taken. The check was not a large one, but we would like to have your advice as to procedure to take. L. N. Q.

It seems probable that the amount is not large enough to make court proceedings worth while.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

STREET IN NEED OF PAVING.

Chicago, March 30.—[Friend of the People.]—After a rain or snow storm the street fronting our property overflows with water, which stands there for several days. Since the sewer does not drain this water off, it is impossible for pedestrians to cross the street. Would appreciate your taking this up with the proper authorities. H. K.

Report is made that on receipt of complaint inlets were opened to permit water to drain. Sewer and inlets are in good condition, but Ada street is an old macadam street beyond repair, surface being full of depressions in which the water lies after a heavy rain. Street should be repaved at the earliest possible moment. JOSEPH J. BUTLER, Superintendent of Streets.

NO CHATTEL MORTGAGE!

Chicago, March 28.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. I bought furniture for a restaurant on credit. 2. Later moved to another place, taking the furniture, and went into partnership, later selling out to my partner, who does not know that the furniture is not paid for. 3. He assumes all bills. 4. Can he be compelled to pay on the furniture which I still owe for? 5. Am I to pay the balance? 6. Or should it be paid by the man I sold out to? T. K.

1. If you bought from a regular dealer, he probably gave a chattel mortgage but, if so, it is surprising that you do not mention it.
2. Such removal, without consent, would be a violation of the chattel mortgage.
3. It seems probable that the wording was such as to assume only the partnership obligations. Your obligation to pay the balance on the furniture was an individual obligation.
4. It seems possible that you may be liable under the bulk sales law.
5. The mere fact that your partner may have agreed to pay does not obligate your creditor to look to your partner rather than to you.
6. Depends on his understaking and upon the other facts above referred to.

WHAT! NO GHOSTS!

A mystic in New York, one Nino Pecararo, who says he won Conan Doyle to spiritualism, front pages all over the place by declaring his séances were all fakes. Which, of course, is true because Nino admits it, but let's don't all jump at once to the conclusion that spiritualism is hereby done for. I never saw a ghost either; I've never seen a spiritualist manifestation that I didn't think was the baloney, but what of that? Every time I listen to the radio I know that a ghost from the spirit world could hardly be more unexplainable. Long ago a man who said the earth was round was considered a fool, and sometimes he was put to death, and if he escaped that they locked him up for a dangerous lunatic.

When men declared that some day they would be able to fly like birds they were set down for lunatics, too. But today—well, look up at the sky and watch the airplanes skimming so gracefully along. Think of what electricity is doing. No ghosts? Maybe not. I don't believe in them. I never have. But if I ever meet one and find out after I've given him the acid test that he's genuine I won't be surprised. I'll just say: "Well, you're something else I can't understand either. But, like the other things, I'll take you for granted. Only with all the millions and millions of people in the world, why pick on me?"

SONG.

Under the trees when the life of April
Pierces the dead leaf-mold in the glen,
Under the trees when the buds are breaking
I shall come back to peace again;

I shall be quiet under the branches,
Under the nests of the nesting birds,
Hearing no sound but the sound of the birches
Speaking with low and lovely words;

I have a joy in the shining springtime
Clearer and lighter than joy can be Save it be born of the new grass growing
And the young leaves of a white birch tree.

DOROTHY KISSLING.

A SUIT has been brought in New York by a banker alleging the bolsheviks stole $9,500,000 in gold ingots. Well, if they did, and the police and the magistrates and the rest of the gang down in New York didn't get their split they're going to make one awful holler.

A SAXOPHONE PLAYER in Richmond county, New York, has been sent to jail for a term of from two and a half to five years. Wait—I'm wrong. See what comes of jumping to conclusions. He was sent to jail for possessing six wives all at once.

"WORLD Looks to U. S. to Lead Prosperity Return: Stamp."—Evening American headline. Whaddaya mean "stamp"? Rubber stamp?

AND NOW IT SEEMS that the inhabitants of the Virgin islands are seething with indignation because the President said on looking them over, "When we paid twenty-five million dollars for the Virgin islands we acquired an effective poorhouse." The Virgin islanders say they were prosperous under Danish rule, but the U. S. of A., with its prohibition law, took away their only livelihood—the manufacture of Jamaica rum. We won't let 'em make Jamaica rum any more and they can't make anything else, and so they're mighty poor. But they don't like to have it rubbed in. "It is a small college," said Daniel Webster of Dartmouth as he burst into tears and wept all over the Supreme court, "but there are those that love it." Maybe some of the Virgin islanders feel the same way towards their native land. Who knows?

"EDSEL FORD YACHT Safe in Miami."—Daily News headline. Well, of course, Miami is Mr. Capone's home town, but still we didn't know it was news when Edsel Ford's yacht or anything else was safe there.

THE GREATEST secretary of the treasury since Hamilton is gazing at the greatest deficit in the treasury before or since Alexander, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Tut, tut, dearie, use decent circumlocution as they do in Washington. That ain't no deficit, that's a "necessary concomitant of a business cycle."

"McADOO Sees Democratic Defeat if Prohibition Is Chief Issue."—The Trib. Ah, Mr. McAdoo, us Democrats have been licked so often that some of the brethren see defeat if prohibition is not the chief issue; others see defeat if ice cream is the chief issue; if going to church on Sunday is the chief issue; if wearing blue spats is the chief issue. Don't think up the ifs that mean defeat, Mr. McAdoo; think up something that means victory.

MAKE BELIEVE LADY.

She never grew up, though her hair turned gray;
And the rose in her cheeks all faded away;
And her figure slumped, and her shoulders stooped,
And her step grew slow, and her proud head drooped.

She never grew up. She wouldn't face
Sorrow or suffering, or disgrace.
She hid her head, and she wouldn't believe
The truth when the truth would make her grieve.

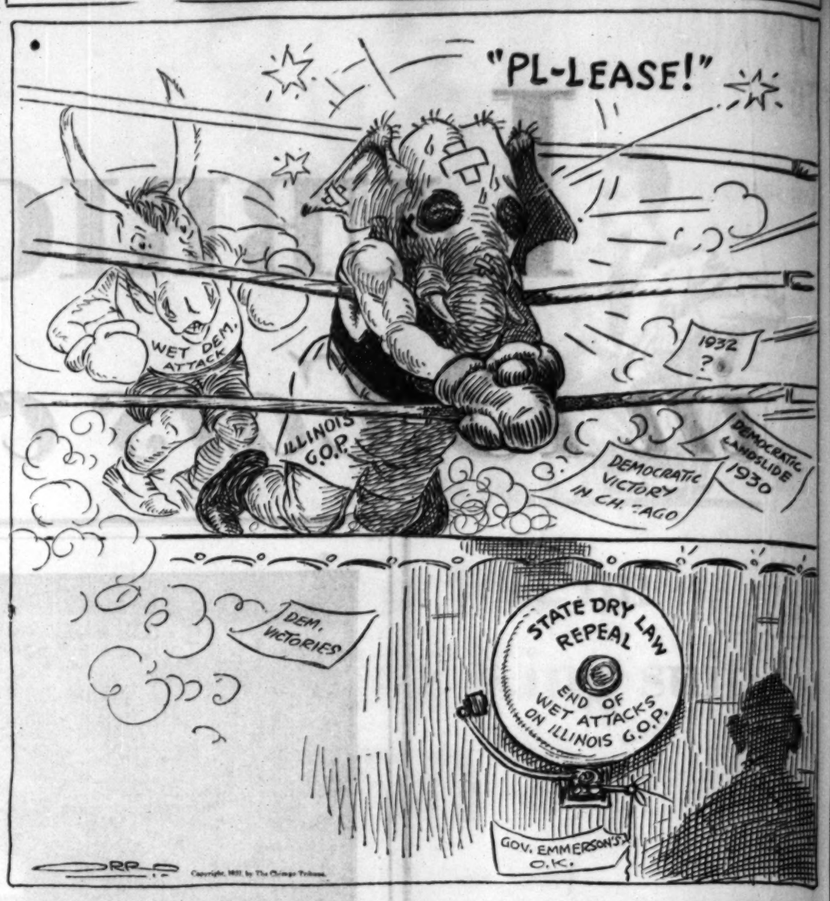
She never grew up. She couldn't guess
That back of pain lay happiness;
That sorrow strengthened the soul that bore it
And made it fit for what lay before it.

She never grew up. She never knew
If you live on dreams that they can't come true.
And everything life had to give
She missed—for she never learned how to live.

MARJORIE F. W.

WE'RE ALL going to miss Nick Longworth. He was one statesman that didn't get long faced, serious, and oracular from living in Washington and helping to run the government. He had a big brain and did splendid things, but he kept sunny natured and knew how to smile. And people loved him. We need many more like him. R. H. L.

ONLY THE BELL CAN SAVE HIM



FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 10, 1915.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Germany has sent to the United States government a note complaining that this country is unfair and protesting against its acts as a violation of neutrality. It contends that the United States has accomplished nothing in its diplomatic correspondence with the allies to obtain for American exporters the right to ship foodstuffs to the civilian population of a belligerent country. It intimates also that the United States has virtually acquiesced in the British order in council prohibiting commerce with Germany. It calls attention to the fact that the allies are obtaining large shipments of arms and ammunition from the United States and contrasts this with the failure to furnish food to the civilian population of Germany.

PARIS.—The French under the guidance of Gen. Joffre are continuing with success their offensive movement between the Meuse and Moselle. In many cases the fighting is hand to hand and Germany's dead litter the fields. Fifteen attacks by the Germans in the forest of Montmare were repulsed and each time the Germans left heaps of dead behind. The war office statement says that the important position of Les Eparges, which dominates the plain of Woevre and which the Germans defended obstinately, is now in the hands of the French.

PETROGRAD.—Negotiations to obtain honorable terms of peace have been opened by Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, the Bourse Gazette, one of the most conservative papers here, says. It is stated that Russia will demand the surrender of all Galicia, including Cracow, as a portion of its peace terms.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 10, 1901.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Washington has seldom seen a more thoroughly enthusiastic crowd than that gathered in and about Iowa circle today to witness the formal unveiling of the statue of Maj. Gen. John A. Logan. When the flags fell and the statue was revealed in its striking glory there were shouts from grizzled veterans and moist eyes as they called along the line: "It's Black Jack sure enough. Black Jack, God bless him." It was a proud day for Illinois and a still prouder one for the white haired widow of the famous soldier who, with other members of the general's family, arrived a little before the appointed time. President McKinley was escorted to the scene by Gen. Grenville M. Dodge of the Army of the Tennessee, the presiding officer. With Mrs. Logan were Franklin Simmons, the sculptor, and his wife. Speakers were President McKinley and Senator Chauncey M. Depew.

CHICAGO.—Dr. James. B Angell, president of the University of Michigan, was the chief speaker at the Appomattox day banquet of the Hamilton club. He praised President McKinley's policy in the orient, on which he was peculiarly fitted to speak because he was formerly in China on a high mission for the government.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 10, 1881.

MILWAUKEE.—The city has been in mourning today for Senator Matt Carpenter. A special funeral train brought the body from Washington, accompanied by a committee of senators and representatives. Senator Conkling delivered the body to Gov. Smith in a few well chosen remarks in which he said: "To Wisconsin the pale and sacred clay belongs, but the memory and the fame of Matthew Hale Carpenter are the nation's treasures and long will the sisterhood of the states mourn the bereavement which bows all hearts today." The funeral services will be held tomorrow.

CHICAGO.—In a special cable to the editor of THE TRIBUNE from Constantinople, Stefanovitch, president of the central relief committee of the Scio earthquake sufferers, says: "The catastrophe at Scio has surpassed all conception. The number of killed and wounded is more than 15,000. There are 40,000 famished sufferers who require immediate assistance. The central committee here implores you to open subscriptions for their relief." A dispatch from Scio says that of the 70,000 inhabitants on the island 6,000 or 7,000 were killed and 25 per cent of the survivors were injured.

PRAYERS FOR GUIDANCE.

Chicago, April 8.—In addition to our well wishes, Cermak needs our prayers that God may help and sustain him, for he's got a dirty mess to clean up. H. C. C.

FROM A SO-CALLED HOODLUM.

Chicago, April 8.—After 15 years of misrepresentation and vituperation, and with the aid of some renegade Republicans, you have finally succeeded in removing Thompson from the political field, at least temporarily. But remember, no Republican candidate for mayor that you may indorse in the future can be elected without the backing of Bill Thompson and his numerous friends, so you might as well remain in the Democratic fold. I am one of the many so-called hoodlums that during the last year has quit paying money for perverted news. JOHN OFFENLOCK.

TOMORROW THE BIRDS WILL SING.

Chicago, April 7.—Thompson was no more my choice than Cermak; I voted for neither. But had I voted, it would have been for Thompson, solely in protest of your tactics. Regardless of your liberal and intelligent attitude on many matters, you are so clearly hopeless in others that every day I am more and more convinced that when THE TRIBUNE dies it will be none too soon. E. WIRTANEN.

OUT OF THE PAST.

Chicago, April 8.—Over the radio, on the night of April 7, I heard Mayor Elect Cermak's first formal speech. Among other things he said: "Crooks had better move out of Chicago or prepare to stay here a long time under restraint. The world will for once understand that Chicago is a safe place to come to."

Now these were precisely the same first words uttered by Thompson, upon his first election, sixteen years ago, as reprinted in THE TRIBUNE'S column of "16 years ago today."

I wonder if these politicians mean what they say or is it just a custom with them, for the holdups, robberies, bombings, kidnapings, and murders still continue. H. LITWACH.

SHEEP AND GOATS.

Chicago, April 8.—The Thompson vote in yesterday's mayoralty election proved to psychologists that there were 475,613 subnormal persons in Chicago. For years the psychologists have been trying to determine this figure and at last have succeeded. M. E. B.

SPRING TONIC.

Chicago, April 1.—The other morning as I was coming home early—O, quite early—I saw a robin on what we laughingly call our front lawn. "Ah!" I exclaimed. "Spring."

The robin looked at me contemptuously. "You're wrong. I merely got tired of them bragging about their weather down in Florida," he bellowed in a deep bass voice.

"So sorry," I sympathized. "You seem to have a bad cold."

"Well, that's as good an excuse as any for taking a drink," was his discourteous reply.

Whereupon he immediately changed himself into a pink elephant, but by this time I had found the keyhole, so I tiptoed upstairs after first removing my shoes. I wonder if any other nature lovers have had the same experience? MARK TREBB.

DIANA.

Chicago, April 3.—Miss Monroe and Mr. Wilson have laboriously undertaken to explain just why Mr. Millies' Diana fountain is beautiful. The sculptor's idea of the huntress as youthful and wild is obvious and needs no explanation, nor do we quarrel with him as far as that conception of her is concerned, though it need not be the only one.

We refuse, however, to admit that our failure to enjoy the fountain as a work of art is due to prejudice or to stubborn conservatism. We do not wish to argue its admirers into the belief that it lacks beauty. In the first place, it can't be done. In the second place, they are fortunate who are able to obtain esthetic pleasure from the work, and why should we wish to interfere with their joy? The fountain is there and will probably not be removed. Let those admire it who may.

If its form, its grotesque composition, its ponderous mass of green color do not delight our esthetic sensibilities the oratory and the logic of a Demosthenes cannot change the situation. If Mr. Wilson prefers brunettes we have no quarrel with him, but no amount of argument would cause us to relinquish our preference for blonds. Appreciation of art in any form is not a subject for debate. We like it or we don't.

This is a wonderful age. We are provided with "modern" music to delight the ear and with "modern" painting and sculpture to delight the eye. We have a faint suspicion that the composers, the painters, and the sculptors are laughing in their sleeves at our enjoyment of their art. We cherish the hope that the urge for novelty will not result in "modern" smells to delight the nose. We fear our prejudice and conservatism would object to the substitution of antique eggs for attar of roses. Again we ask, "What's all the shooting about?" R. H. NORTON.

PICTURES FROM THE PAST.

Effingham, Ill., March 27.—Do you remember way back when THE TRIBUNE put out a picture to be framed with each Sunday paper, almost forty years ago?

While going through some things this afternoon I found four of them. On the back of one it read, "52c pays for one month's subscription to the daily TRIBUNE [except Sunday], and you receive a frame for your SUNDAY TRIBUNE picture free." It has a lot more printed on it, and the date, May 20, 1894. The pictures are "The Plot," "The First Lesson," "Doggie's Toilet," and "The Young Mariners." They are all very nice and something that appeals to children. Our boys are going to have them framed for their room, as they are real proud of them. And Bobbie says, "Why, mother, they are almost antique." Thanks for the pictures of years ago. MRS. SIR THOMAS.

WESTEND.

Oak Park, Ill., April 1.—Why not the city of Westend, extending from the Du Page county line to Chicago, from Schiller Park on the north to Summit on the south? A coördinated government for all the western suburbs with its many advantages and a population of about 200,000. Westend in London, Berlin, and Paris is the preferential residence district. LIBERALS LEAVE TO WIN GOVERNOR TO DRY REPEALER

Legislators to Be Heard This Morning.

Bent on counteracting the dry propaganda that has been poured into Gov. Emmerson's ears in the attempt to persuade him to veto the O'Grady-McDermott state prohibition law repealer, a party of liberal Cook county legislators left for Springfield last night. This morning they will meet a group of downstate wet leaders and the combined forces will be given a hearing before the governor at 10 a. m.

Representative Thomas J. O'Grady [Dem., Chicago], co-author of the repealer, headed the Cook delegation. With him were Republicans and Democrats. At Springfield they will find Senator Victor P. Michel [Rep., Peoria] and a handful of downstate members who fought for the bill in its trip through the assembly.

The drys already have had their day with the governor. Last week, as the legislature was preparing to adjourn over election time, several senators and representatives, some of them from districts that went liberal in the referendum last November, urged him to disregard that expression and the majority vote of the assembly. Since then, according to Springfield reports, others interested in the retention of the state dry law have sought to add their weight of propaganda.

The delegation that left Chicago last night to present the other side of the argument included, besides Representative O'Grady, Senator Frank McDermott [Dem., Chicago] is author of the bill; Senator Ray Paddock [Rep., Wauconda]; Senator Thomas J. Courtney [Dem., Chicago], the minority leader; Representative John M. Lee [Dem., Chicago], Representative Sol P. Roderick [Rep., Chicago], and Representative Frank McCarthy [Rep., Elkin].

The downstaters who will arrive in Springfield this morning included in addition to Senator Michel, Representative Leroy M. Green [Rep., Rockford], Representative Howard L. Doyle [Dem., Decatur], Representative Truman A. Snell [Dem., Carlinville], and Senator James O. Monroe [Dem., Collinsville].

Senator Michel said yesterday that his address to the governor will include calling his attention to the fact that he, as the state's chief executive, was chairman of the Republican state convention last August which agreed, without a dissenting vote, to submit the question of repealing the dry law to the voters last November.

"That convention subscribed to the referendum and the governor presided at the convention," the Peoria member said. "He must be told that the Republican party cannot long be the majority party if it does not recognize the wishes of its members."

Representative O'Grady has engineered his bill through the house in three consecutive sessions, only to have it fall in the senate of the two previous legislatures.

The present upper house passed the bill by a vote of 26 to 24.

"It should not be necessary to retell all the woes, all the ills, and all the infamies of prohibition," O'Grady said before he boarded the train. "Gov. Emmerson has heard all this before. What we should concern ourselves with is emphasizing to him that by signing the bill, he will merely be doing what the people of Illinois would have him do. A law should exist on the statutes only so long as the people wish it there; when they signify that it should be repealed, it should go.

"Three times a state referendum has shown that this bigoted legislation does not suit Illinois, and twice, over the heads of the people, the senate refused to accept this mandate. But victory came with the present senate and surely the governor cannot fail to realize the sentiment this reveals."

NEW GAS PISTOL STUNS VICTIMS WITHOUT HARM

Gives Police an Effective Weapon.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—A pistol which shoots a new synthetic gas instead of lead, and which renders its victims unconscious for thirty minutes without permanent harmful results, has been perfected here by J. W. Van Karner, a firearms expert. A demonstration of the effectiveness of the weapon was given this afternoon by its inventor.

The Van Karner gas gun differs in design and appearance from the ordinary revolver. It is lighter, weighing only 21 ounces when loaded with a clip of three cartridges, and is slightly larger than a .38 caliber automatic.

In a previous test of the disabling qualities of the weapon, the inventor permitted a shot of the gas to be fired into his face. He said he was out cold for approximately fifteen minutes and it was almost thirty minutes before he was entirely recovered. Apparently the gas left no after effect of any kind.

Two Sizes of Gas Gun.

So far only test models of the revolver have been made. They are in two sizes, the larger having a bore resembling a 12 gauge shotgun barrel. The smaller weapon holds three cartridges and is fired by a conventional trigger. The big gun also holds three shells, but it is fired by a hand grip.

The contents of the cartridges is a special mixture consisting of various gases, certain parts of which are asphyxiating, irritants and toxic or stenotypes. Parts of these gases are light and highly volatile. Another part consists of a heavy disappearing gas.

The gas leaves the muzzle in a bullet like mass with the bang of a shotgun and travels at the speed of 500 feet per second. It is immediately effective up to 50 feet, but the highest effective point is between 20 to 40 feet.

Can Vary Gas Strength.

"An interesting feature of the gun," according to Mr. Van Karner, "is that the strength of the gas bullets can be increased or decreased. The cartridges will come in various degrees of strength, distinguished by their color, thus controlling the period of helplessness. The effectiveness of the gas can be readjusted to the range. Statistics reveal that most of the persons shot are less than 25 feet away.

"The gun is simple to handle, modernistic in appearance and foolproof. It should be characterized as a humane weapon, for it is not directed to the killing of human beings. The weapon accomplishes that which other weapons in use set out to do—to protect the user and to place the object of its attack in a temporary defenseless position. It eliminates all danger of death or disablement. It enables any officer of the law to subdue a criminal or convict without the necessity of taking life."

LIPSCHULTZ AND GUZIK IN COURT; FIX TRIAL DATES

Sam Guzik and Louis Lipschultz, brother and brother-in-law, respectively, of Jack Guzik, Capone gang captain, who has already been convicted and sentenced to five years for income tax fraud, were arraigned before Federal Judge Wilkerson on income tax evasion indictments yesterday.

The trial of Guzik was set for May 11 and that of Lipschultz for June 8. The appeal of Ralph Capone from his three year sentence for tax fraud will be heard next Wednesday by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The calendar of the Appellate court, printed yesterday, does not list the appeal of Al Capone from his conviction and sentence to six months in jail for contempt of court, but United States Attorney Johnson hopes to have it disposed of before July 1.

Christian P. Paschen, who was building commissioner in the cabinet of former Mayor Thompson, is expected to follow Guzik and Lipschultz on trial this summer for alleged income tax fraud.

G. O. P. EX-LEADER GIVEN YEAR AS U. S. JOB SELLER

Georgian Admits Being Paid $6,800.

Atlanta, Ga., April 9.—(AP)—A federal jury here today convicted John B. Dove, former Georgia Republican leader, of selling federal offices, and Judge Marvin Underwood sentenced him to serve a year and a day in the federal reformatory at Chillicothe, O.

Dove admitted receiving the payments charged in the indictments, and $6,800 besides, which he said were turned over to the national Republican organization. In the course of the trial, the defense attempted to bring out that contribution to political funds constitutes the normal method of acquiring appointive offices. Testimony intended to support that contention was barred by the court as irrelevant.

The jury convicted Dove on 38 counts of violation of the patronage act, which alleged collection of $1,000 from C. E. Westbrook on promise of obtaining for him the office of collector of internal revenue here; $500 from P. B. Benson as payment for the appointment of his son Ernest as postmaster at College Park, Ga., and $276 from Charles O'Neal to obtain appointment of his son Wade, as deputy clerk of the northern Georgia District court.

Disagreement was reported by the jury on a count charging mail fraud in the transaction with Westbrook.

Clint W. Hager, United States district attorney, told the jury an acquittal would "license this man to continue the wholesale bartering of public offices." He said the patronage act was passed to correct abuses that had made southern party politics "so putrid they stank as far as Washington."

Managua Feels Two More Tremors; Cleanup Goes On

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, April 9.—(AP)—Two more earth tremors, slight and without further damage, were felt amid the ruins of Managua early this morning. A government bulletin published today, carried the caption, "Managua Will Be Reconstructed," across its first page. The railroad gap, which was filled in by the quake, has now been reopened to Granada and Corinto. Special planes are being used to handle the excess air traffic since the quake.

CHURCH'S FIGHT TO OUST FAMILY NEAR SHOWDOWN

Developments last night were rapidly approaching a climax in the unique fight between the family of Clarence Spierling and the trustees of the Hickory Corners Methodist church, three miles east of Antioch. The fight is over the tenancy by the Spierlings of the church as a home.

The latest development was the arrest yesterday of Mrs. Dorothy Spierling, wife of Clarence, on a warrant charging disorderly conduct. She is accused by Frank Edwards, a church trustee, of using a shotgun to chase him out of the church which she calls her home. Mrs. Spierling was taken before Justice of the Peace Harry Hoyt in Waukegan, freed on a $200 bond, and told to return April 15.

At 2 o'clock next Sunday afternoon the trustees, worshipers, and a pastor will try to enter the church for services. The Spierlings hold the place, however, and insist no one shall enter.

Spierling and his family moved into the church more than a month ago after their house near by burned. They claim right to occupancy on the ground the church is in disuse and that the trustees have violated provisions which hold that unless regular services are held the church site shall revert to the estate from which the site was willed.

COLLEGE TAUGHT "HERESIES" HURT G. O. P.—LUCAS

Alleges Radical Ideals Are Implanted in Youth.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special.]—Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the national Republican committee, tonight told a gathering of young Republicans that a great part of the teaching force in American schools and colleges is teaching radical and impossible politics, heretic to the traditions of the grand old party. He asserted that the teaching of such doctrines was making it difficult for the party to get its share of the two million young voters which enter the American political arena each year.

Mr. Lucas spoke at a banquet of the men's division of the young Republicans of the Capital Republican club. Representatives from young Republican organizations in all sections of the country attended the meeting.

Advises Clubs of Young.

In indorsing the work undertaken by the young Republicans, Mr. Lucas advised that every effort be made to catch the young voters young. He advised that clubs and societies be formed in each local community througout the country under the leadership and with the advice and counsel of the regular state and county organization leaders.

The problem of educating and organizing the first voter is at once the most important and most difficult which confronts the Republican party, Mr. Lucas asserted. "The problem is made doubly difficult to the Republican party," he said, "because of the fact that the tendencies of the young man and young woman are away from conservatism in thinking and acting and also because the formative influences in many of our educational institutions are largely radical.

"It is a matter of common information and deep concern that many of our universities and colleges are literally saturated with radicalism. Moreover, the text books, the class room lectures, and the private conversations of a great part of our teaching force in our institutions of higher education are antagonistic to the traditional policies of the Republican party.

Hotbed of Theorists.

"This is largely because the authors of the text books, as well as the teachers in the schools and institutions of higher learning, are theorists. They live in a world of idealism. They advocate political policies which in the abstract are delightful and would be workable were the human race perfect, but which in the concrete are impossible, and if put into practice would soon bring disaster and distress in their wake. This accounts for the fact that many teachers in the schools and universities are free traders. Free trade between all nations and peoples would be an ideal condition, provided all peoples were ideal and all nations were animated purely by altruistic motives.

"Inasmuch as it seems to be hopeless to expect a reform of the text books which free trade, internationalism, public ownership of private industries, abolition of party government, etc., and inasmuch as it is apparently equally hopeless to expect the teachers in institutions of higher education to abandon their radicalism and socialistic theories, the approach to the young man and the young woman who is about to become a citizen must be made independent of our educational system."

DICTATOR STALIN IS GRAY AND FAT, BUT MIND IS KEEN

Works 16 Hours Per Day on Five Year Plan.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MOSCOW, March 12.—[By Mail.]—Dictator Josef Stalin has aged perceptibly in the three years since I saw him last. He is now approaching his 51st birthday, and looks it, whereas in 1928 he did not seem his 48 years. At that time he might have been taken for 44 or 45.

JOSEF STALIN.

"Uncle Joe" has taken on some weight, too. His chin has lost the hard line that marked it in 1928, and there is a trace of double chin. His countenance is not so mobile as it was when only a lean veneer of tissue covered the facial muscles.

Three years ago the dictator's hair was raven black and his fierce, militant mustache, like a great ebon smudge across his face, had only a trace of gray in it. Today his bushy tousled head and mustache are streaked with it. A stubborn "cow lick" resembles the pelt of a silver fox.

Glitter in Eye Fades.

Stalin's eyes do not glitter and snap as of old. The lids drop down and half conceal them, and he peers up and out from below his thick brows, where formerly he threw back his head and darted swift inquisitive glances.

His hands are hard and firm and scrupulously white, with long, capable fingers, the nails carefully pared and clean. But he gesticulates not at all, a shrug of the shoulders being his only mannerism.

Stalin wore a cheap dark blue suit with the Russian shirt, similar to a pajama jacket but with a stocklike band buttoning at the side of the neck in lieu of collar and tie, much like the make-up of a Chinese laundry man. He wore half leather boots like those issued to the German army during the war, and a black astrakhan cap.

Still Russia's Leader.

Mentally, they say, Stalin is as strong as ever, gripping the entire fabric of his realm, personally supervising all the various departments of the government, the acknowledged leader of the communist party, the moving spirit of the five year plan, and the real chief of supplies of food and clothing for the country.

But he is fatigued and shows it. His colleagues assert that he works never less than 16 hours a day in his huge office in a dingy building. He doesn't live in the Kremlin, contrary to general belief.

Stalin is determined to get the five year plan through before he breaks down. The obsession that he must keep going haunts him and forces him to abandon all rest, recreation and vacation until the project is realized. Meanwhile, he is grooming certain of his intimates whom he has lifted up to power to carry on if he should be stricken down.

Molotov, chairman of the council of people's commissars and one of the ten members of the political bureau of the communist party, the master machine of the entire Red organization, is his favorite now. Mikoyan, former chief of the G. P. U., now occupying the crucial position of commissar of supplies, handling distribution of food, clothing and other requisites for the domestic population, is another. Mikoyan is not, however, a member of the Red political bureau.

Kalinin Story Factor.

Other members are M. M. Kalinin, president of the central executive committee of the U. S. S. R., and who would be president of soviet Russia if they had such a title, K. E. Voroshilov, minister of war, commander in chief of the Red army and chairman of the revolutionary military council.

Leon Kaganovitch, a Ukrainian Jew, is another in whom Stalin reposes great confidence. At present he has no other portfolio than membership in the "polit-buro." Then there is Ordjonikidzkt, commissar of the supreme economic council, which handles directly the application of the five year plan.

Menjinsky, present leader of the G. P. U., is a doctor, originally from what is now Poland. He is not among the elect of the "polit-buro" either. Two other members of this group are Rudzutak, originally a Lett, and vice chairman of the council of people's commissars, and also member of the council of labor and defense.

Mitchell Assistant to Aid in Prosecuting Rowbottom

Evansville, Ind., April 9.—(AP)—Washington dispatches today stated that Nugent Dodds, assistant attorney general in the department of justice, would come to Evansville to assist in prosecuting Harry E. Rowbottom, former congressman, whose trial on charges of bribery starts next Tuesday.

RUSSIAN PAPER NAMES HOOVER IN ANTI-SOVIET PLOT

MOSCOW, April 9.—(AP)—Pravda, official organ of the communist party, today featured a story on its front page from a special correspondent in New York purporting to relate details of an alleged plan in the United States in 1930 to assist in an intervention movement against the soviet union.

The correspondent claimed to have information that President Hoover and Alexander Legge, then chairman of the federal farm board, were leaders of the group. The account said that the American group did not plan military assistance, but had agreed to provide sufficient supplies, particularly grain, for a French army to conquer the bolshevists.

The correspondent said that the plan had been abandoned because the recent trial of eight engineers in Moscow had revealed some of its details.

Sudden change to COMPLEXION BEAUTY Amazed her Friends

BUT she never told them why. For years her skin was dull and sallow. Pimples, blotches and blemishes caused by constipation marred her chance of beauty. But not any more.

Tiny calcium wafers worked their wonders for her. Gentle internal cleansers—they quickly help to remove the causes intestinal stasis and poisonous wastes that dull the eye, blotch the skin and stupefy the mind and personality.

Try This Five Day Test

A few days' use of Stuart's Calcium Wafers will often work a wondrous change: soft, silken skin clear and free from faults! Bright, sparkling eyes! Alert and vigorous in mind and body! No wonder that so many thousands of people find that an occasional sugar-coated Calcium Wafer (Stuart's) is all the tonic that they need.

Prof. Goebel's Will Filed; Leaves Estate of $18,000

The will of Prof. Julius Goebel, noted Germanic language scholar, who died on March 28, was filed yesterday with Mitchell C. Robin, clerk of the Probate court. The will leaves an estate of $18,000 to the widow, Mrs. Kathryn Goebel, 708 Willow road, Winnetka.

Attorney Wins $37,500 in Suit Against Hotel

A verdict of $37,500 was returned by a jury in Superior Judge Steffen's court yesterday in the suit of Attorney Louis P. O'Connell for $75,000 damages against the Stevens Hotel company. Attorney O'Connell had contended that he had been retained by the hotel company to obtain a reduction in the hotel's taxes and that he won a reduction of $189,000 in taxes for 1927 in the County court. He charged the hotel failed to pay his fee, which was to be one-third of the taxes saved.

"I'M going, anyway"

THE modern Miss needs no "time out" for the time of month.

If you've ever taken Bayer Aspirin for a headache, you know how soon the pain subsides. It is just as effective in the relief of those pains peculiar to women!

Don't dedicate certain days of every month to suffering. It's old-fashioned. It's unnecessary. Aspirin will always enable you to carry on in comfort. Take enough to assure your complete comfort. If it is genuine aspirin it cannot possibly hurt you. Bayer Aspirin does not depress the heart. It does not upset the stomach. It does nothing but stop the pain.

Headaches come at inconvenient times. So do colds. But a little Bayer Aspirin will always save the day. A throat so sore you can hardly swallow is made comfortable with one good gargle made from these tablets. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Rheumatism. Pains that once kept people home are forgotten half an hour after taking a few of these remarkable tablets. So are the little nagging aches that bring fatigue and "nerves" by day, or a sleepless night.

Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets cost so very little after all, that it doesn't pay to experiment with imitations!

COAL HEAT COSTS LESS

Building, 1721 West 63rd Street
By burning coal the owner of this building holds his fuel costs down to $1,200 every five years. If he burned the fuel that next to coal is most economical, his bills would be $2,432.65 every 5 years. If he burned the third fuel, they would be $4,273.75. . . .

DURING the past winter thousands of Chicago families and building owners have made substantial savings on heating costs by burning coal, instead of either of the two fuels that can be substituted for it. Two hundred and forty-two merchants in fuel, members of the Chicago Coal Merchants Association have helped some 95% of these families realize the last dollar of possible savings by delivering them the coal they ordered unmixed with a cheaper grade and by seeing to it that there were 2,000 pounds in every ton.

MRS. JAMES A. DEPEW, 9906 S. IRVING AVE., CHICAGO.—"Being great animal lovers, my husband and I answered a Sunday Tribune advertisement offering a young St. Bernard for $15.00. When we saw the dog, I fell in love with him. We bought him and brought him home (to an apartment). Ridiculous? Yes, but we were young and thoughtless. Of course, after a week or so we realized we'd practically purchased a white elephant and much as we loved him, we could not house him in a city apartment. I therefore advertised him in the Sunday Tribune for $50.00 two weeks after purchase. My phone began ringing at 7 a. m. At 8 my first caller came, a wholesale grocer whose dog had been shot in a robbery, and who wanted a young large dog to train for watching. He paid me the $50.00 in two minutes and departed with my dog. I had calls until the end of the week."

MRS. M. B. PARLIMAN, 3724 W. 63RD PLACE, CHICAGO, ILL.—"We had a lease for a flat when we suddenly decided to buy a home. The flat owner said he would release us if he could get a tenant for him. I put an ad in the Chicago Tribune and had the flat rented before 9 o'clock on the morning the ad appeared. I had thirteen inquiries before night. That's what I call getting more than your money's worth!"

* * *

MRS. A. CASSIDY, 816 LITTLE ST., STREATOR, ILL.—"A short time ago I was living in Worth, Illinois, and I had an automatic cradle I wanted to sell. So I put an ad in the Tribune. In a few days a lady came out to see the cradle. She paid me a good price for it. This lady said it was a godsend to get the cradle as she had twin babies and it was a great help to her. So I think Tribune want ads are a friend in need, and I advise all my friends that if they want to get things done to put a want ad in the Tribune."

R. D. C., 306 E. MULBERRY ST., BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—"I have used your want ads for years. In 1927 I bought an Oldsmobile through a want ad I saw in the Tribune. It was a 1924 model and I am still using it. I sure got a good buy for my money. I have also gotten good jobs through your paper, as I am a traveling salesman."

* * *

C. B. VEIT, 849 W. RANDOLPH ST., RM. 307, CHICAGO, ILL.—"Under date of March 4 and 5, I placed an ad in the Chicago Tribune which called for experienced builders' hardware salesmen, covering men who would be interested in selling in the city of Chicago on a straight commission basis. The response resulted in my obtaining the services of several men of exceptional experience and ability. In addition, much to my surprise, this ad was answered by personal calls to my office by men from St. Louis, Detroit and Kalamazoo, who were interested in a proposition of the character I had to offer in their respective cities. It was my original intention to visit both Detroit and St. Louis and advertise in local papers, respectively, for men to cover those cities with a proposition similar to that offered for Chicago. However, without having to leave my office, I have been able to make very desirable connections in both instances. The total expense figured over $14.00. My compliments to the Chicago Tribune for its splendid work."

EIGHT NEGRO RAPISTS GIVEN DEATH PENALTY

Life of 14 Year Old Boy Is Spared.

Scottsboro, Ala., April 9.—(AP)—Eight Negroes, ranging in age from 16 to 20 years, today were sentenced to die in the electric chair at Kilby prison on Friday, July 10, for raping two white girl hoboes aboard a freight train, March 24.

The Negroes showed no emotion as Judge J. A. Hawkins pronounced sentence.

Attorneys here said they believed passing death sentences on eight persons for the same offense on the same day was without parallel in the history of the nation.

A mistrial was ordered for the ninth Negro, Roy Wright, 14, of Chattanooga, after a jury deliberating 19 hours was unable to reach agreement as to punishment.

The Negroes sentenced to death were Charlie Weems and Ozie Powell, Atlanta; Eugene Williams, Andy Wright, Clarence Norris, and Heywood Patterson, all of Chattanooga; Olen Montgomery, Monroe, Ga., and Willie Robertson, Columbus, Ga.

Stephen Roddy, Chattanooga, chief of defense counsel, entered a motion for a new trial for Heywood Patterson, which automatically stays his sentence, and announced the other convictions would be appealed to the Supreme court.

The Negroes, in a bus under military escort, were taken to Gadsden.

Federal Judge Waddill Dies at Richmond, Va.

Richmond, Va., April 9.—(AP)—Judge Edmund Waddill of the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals died today at his home here after a long illness. He was 76 years of age.

NEW ADMINISTRATION WINS COURT DELAY ON 2 TRANSIT CASES

Transit litigation in two courts was postponed temporarily yesterday to give Mayor Cermak and Corporation Counsel Busch an opportunity to become familiar with the city's end of the proceedings involving the proposed State street subway.

Eugene Holland, who was attorney for the board of local improvements under Busch during the Dever administration, appeared in the Superior court before Judge E. M. Mangan and obtained a continuance in the State street widening case until April 17.

In the suit before Superior Judge William J. Lindsay for a temporary injunction to restrain the city from expending any of the transit fund, Attorney Walter L. Fisher, representing the city, asked for a continuance so that he could confer with Busch. The hearing was continued until April 14.

The suit, brought by holders of transit securities, attacks the transit ordinance and the enabling legislation on which it is based as unconstitutional. The case was called first before Judge Denis E. Sullivan, but was transferred to Judge Lindsay by Judge Sullivan, who owns some transit bonds.

ASKS JUDGE FOR CELL IN ALIMONY ROW AND GETS IT

Otto Roubal, a salesman, of Cicero was brought before Judge Rudolph Desort of the Superior court yesterday to explain why he had failed to pay $108 in back alimony to his estranged wife, Mrs. Helen Roubal.

"I don't want to be bothered paying her money," Roubal explained. "If I have to go to jail, I'm ready."

"We could continue this to let you get some money," the judge suggested.

"No," Roubal insisted. "I want to go to jail and get it over with."

"We're always glad to oblige," Judge Desort said, drawing up an order committing Roubal to alimony row in the county jail for six months.

BUSY BANDIT CAUGHT IN HIS FOURTH ROBBERY

William Leeson, 27 years old, one of Chicago's busiest holdup men, was captured by Policemen Ellsworth Suckow and Sven Peterson of the Town Hall station in a National Tea company store at 3420 Sheffield avenue late yesterday afternoon.

In the two hours previous Leeson had robbed three other stores of the same company at 2159 Southport avenue, 3537 Southport avenue, and 3301 North Clark street, obtaining a total of about $150. His description had been broadcast on the police radio and picked up by Suckow and Peterson, who had gone to the Sheffield avenue store to check up with a division manager on the amounts taken in these stickups.

Suckow recognized the robber among the store's customers from the description. Leeson resisted and tried to draw a pistol, but the policemen overpowered him. At the station he confessed that he had robbed eight restaurants on the south side of a total of $400 Wednesday evening. He added that he was involved in a $7,000 holdup of a creamery company in Detroit in 1921.

PROSPERITY comes back to CHICAGO

CHICAGO has elected a new mayor. "Big Bill the Builder," chief figure in a saturnalia of corruption and extravagance, has gone down in smashing defeat. An outraged people has repudiated the buffoonery and chicanery that passed as civic government.

Tuesday's vote expunged the disgrace which Thompsonism, with its self-seeking officeholders and its gangster support, brought upon the real citizenry. It swept away the vicious elements which for four years exacted millions from business. Chicago went to the polls on Tuesday meaning business—and today Chicago is back on a business basis.

A New Deal for Business

Recovery from the destructive influences which arrested Chicago's progress and held it in the grip of depressed conditions will not be immediately complete. But the energy and industry which built Chicago to its position as capital of the Middle West are again free.

Already there is evidence of a new impetus to business. Retail concerns look forward confidently to operations without interference from racketeers protected by a depraved administration. They are making plans accordingly.

Property owners look to a sane adjustment of the tax muddle which graft and waste have produced. Real estate values will reflect the correction of excessive taxation, with a consequent revival in the building industry. The funds needed for public improvements, but which voters for four years have refused to place in the hands of a political gang whom they dared not trust, may now be voted in the confidence that they will be expended intelligently and honestly.

Chicago Again Goes Forward

Chicago has been strangling in the grip of a machine which despoiled corporations and private citizens, which intimidated shopkeepers and drove factories from the city. Thompsonism and the ill repute it brought upon Chicago have cost local business men hundreds of millions of dollars annually. Now that Thompsonism has been driven out, Chicago again goes forward.

Good times are coming back. Factories may now locate here, assured of reasonable taxation and freedom from blackmail. The visitors who once made Chicago one of America's leading vacation resorts and the leading city for conventions again will respond to the attractions of Chicago's parks and beaches, its hotels and theaters. Retail stores will benefit in larger sales. Larger numbers of people will be employed.

An Invitation to the World

Chicago again is in possession of its heritage. A sober, industrious citizenry built Chicago to a position of industrial and commercial leadership. In less than a hundred years Chicago has become the fourth largest city in the world. Freed finally of the buncombe and debauchery of Thompsonism, it resumes its march of progress.

To the business men of the world Chicago issues an invitation to share in the natural advantages of its location and in the high development of its facilities for manufacturing and distribution.

A Pre-view by Fanny Butcher

"AMERICAN CARAVAN IV.," edited by Alfred Greymborg, Lewis Mumford, and Paul Rosenfeld [Macaulay], offers again to American readers samples [shall we say] of some of the most experimental writing which our contemporaries are doing. The very raison d'etre of the caravans is that within their covers is welcomed work which, in the editor's judgment shows a recognized excellence or potential power inherent in the material and the method or in both—even if both material and method are unconventional.

ALFRED KREYMBORG.

It is a recognized fact among writers of the short story that the exigencies of magazine editors often make it impossible to find publication for sometimes excellent short stories. Those exigencies often are something more arbitrary than the kind of material which is used. Length often militates against a short story's acceptance—it may be too short or too long or just not cut exactly to the pattern of any magazine which might use it.

Certain topics are forbidden in certain magazines.

Certain situations are not tolerated in others.

There is a formula for the popular magazine story which is not always conformed to as stories take their way with a writer's pen. For it is a well known fact to any writer that often work gets out of hand, like a refractory child, and just goes its own way.

It is an encouraging thing, then, to young writers and to all those who are interested in American literature that the editors of the American Caravan are frankly open minded toward new forms and new methods.

Oddly enough, however, this fourth annual of American literature doesn't seem, to this reader at least, to be a collection of especially experimental work. There isn't, so far as I can see, any one surprisingly new method, or any one surprising lode of new material in it. The writing, both in matter and manner, is what I would call the conventionally unconventional. By this time even the unconventional in writing of the last few years has become conventionalized.

I never think of radicalism and its supposed freedoms that I do not remember something that happened in the days when women didn't smoke as openly as they do now, but the conventional radicals were smoking as a badge of their freedom. A girl I knew sincerely believed in woman's economic freedom, but she believed as sincerely that freedom really meant freedom of choice. She chose, because she honestly didn't like to smoke, NOT to smoke. Floyd Dell, who was then the leader of our local Bohemia and one of the most ardent champions of women's rights in the country, argued with her. "You will never be a free woman until you smoke," he said, and he elaborated the theme.

"How can I ever be a free woman," she countered, "if I do things I don't really want to do just because it is the conventional gesture?"

The contributions to "American Caravan IV." seem to me to be—whatever they are actively in what are called the new forms—conventional gestures of unconventionality, rather than forms which have grown out of their own inherent necessities. There is a great deal of excellent and interesting writing in the Caravan. If there is not anything that is likely to start a new school, either of thought or of writing, we must remember that new schools do not leap full armed from the head of Zeus every year.

I wouldn't miss "American Caravan IV." not so much for what it contains as for the fact of its existence. Whatever of tendency toward the unusual is evidenced in young American writing is to be found there each year. It is an encouraging institution. It should be encouraged.

This year's bulky volume contains three short novels, one of them "Civilization" by Philip Stevenson, whose long novel, "The Gospel According to St. Luke's," published a few weeks ago, has caused much comment—it is a keen picture of life at a boys' boarding school. "Civilization" is a penetrating picture of the contact of a highly civilized family with primitive life. It seems to me a perfectly conventional piece of work done with skill. There is one drama by Virgil Geddes, a motion picture scenario by Herbert E. Bernstein, short stories by thirteen writers, among them Hazel Hawthorne, whose "Camera Angles on Three Lives" has an authentic lack of convention in its method; William Faulkner, whose "Ad Astra" lacks, to me at least, the intensity and power of his longer work; S. Guy Endore, whose "A Christmas Story" is an unimportant fragment; Evelyn Scott, whose "Art" isn't the best of hers. Paul Rosenfeld, one of the editors, contributes "The Dark Brown Room."

There are contributions from fifteen poets. Both of the Crosbys, who started the Black Sun Press in Paris, Caresse and her husband Harry, who killed himself last year, are represented, Harry Crosby by a group of prose-poems called "Sleeping Together," which are records of dreams which are set down in all their half madness. Isidor Schneider has four poems, one of them in the conventional prose-poetic form called "A Suite of Dances," which are penetrating and descriptive, and the others in unrhymed verse.

There is a long essay in three parts on "The Impulse of Poetry" by John Gould Fletcher, who has left his active participation in the art to discuss its aesthetics.

Five examples of "prose" are not classifiable or classified by the editors as to form. Of them Robert M. Coates has done "A Ballad of the Bowery" and "People Will Talk," and James Henry Sullivan an article on "What Is This Architecture."

Good morning!

This is a mighty exciting gang picture. It buzzes with suspense; hoists a flag of romance and in its tragic moments is not above cocking the eyebrow of grisly humor.

As you watch Mr. Edward Robinson interpret the title rôle, it is very hard to believe that, in real life, he's a nice, genial citizen who is good to his family. There IS no good in "Little Caesar." He's the devil's spawn. He wants to be bad. He looks bad. He is bad. His malevolence is only exceeded by his conceit, and it is this last, that finally leads him into the web that Inspector Flaharty has been slowly and efficiently weaving for many moons.

Rico Bandello ["Little Caesar"] is a small town desperado when the story starts. He has big city ideas, however. Fired by newspaper reports of the shooting exploits of metropolitan gangs, he boards train to join them, taking with him his young pal of finer caliber, Joe Massara—a dancer.

Joe wants to go straight. He secures a job dancing in a night club with Olga Strassof. He falls in love with her and she begs him to quit the gang—which is shortly headed by none other than "Little Caesar." For, while the big time leaders are brazen bold and tough, the bad little egg from the sticks can always go them one better. None of them is so fearless; none so quick with the trigger finger as Rico Bandello.

Joe wants to go straight. Olga wants him to. But Caesar says—"NO!" . . .

That's enough of the story.

The picture abounds in sinister incident and has several sharply pathetic moments. The work of the supporting players is uniformly excellent, with Douglas Fairbanks, William Collier Jr., and George E. Stone presenting outstanding characterizations. Edward Robinson is perfect as the slimy plasm of imperfection, dubbed "Little Caesar."

Direction, etc., are grand. The film's an adaptation of the novel by W. R. Burnett.

It's paprika!

THE STAGE

"THE FIRST MRS. FRASER," with Grace George as its star, will return to Chicago for an engagement of two weeks at the Selwyn theater, beginning Sunday, April 26. This comedy by St. John Ervine was an important item in last year's Dramatic league program. After six weeks at the Princess theater it was sent to New York, where it ran for more than 300 performances. Its title figured on most of the "ten best plays" catalogues of last season.

Miss George's return engagement will be under the auspices of the Dramatic League of Chicago, and thus forms a supplement to that organization's annual subscription program. The company will include A. E. Matthews and George Grossmith, as before. The only deviations from the original cast will be found in the minor rôles.

"O, Promise Me," a satirical farce dealing with the "breach of promise racket," is headed toward Chicago for a spring engagement. The play was staged by Sam H. Harris in New York with successful results, and he has farmed out the Chicago rights to our own Gregory Ratoff, recently of "Three Little Girls," who is boiling with ambitions to become an impresario.

Mr. Ratoff says that he will bring "O, Promise Me" to Chicago on or about May 3, at either the Selwyn, the Harris or the Apollo theater. He will engage several members of the original New York cast, to wit: Edward H. Robins, Matthew Crowley, Miss Sydney Shields, and Eleanor Bedford. Harlan Briggs, who played the pompous little banker in "It's a Wise Child" at the Erlanger theater last fall, will be signed up for the rôle first acted by Donald Meek.

Mr. Ratoff sponsored the engagement of "Candle Light," with his wife, Eugenie Leontovich as star, at the Princess theater last spring. He played one of the minor barons in the cast and acted as his own press agent. He figured until a few weeks ago as the Baron von Biebitz-Biebitz of "Three Little Girls," and also built up a reputation in the new profession of cabaret master of ceremonies.

Charles Hopkins is preparing to stage "The Roof," John Galsworthy's latest drama, at his theater in New York. The company will include Donald Meek, Owen Davis Jr., Gerald Oliver Smith, C. H. Croker-King, Alan Runge, Noel Tearle, Vera Neilson, Alice Belmore Cliffe, Hugh Huntley, Wilfred Seagram, Ruth Nugent, Edward Raquello, and Russell Thayer.

Maurice Schwartz and his Yiddish Art theater company from New York will appear at the Lawndale theater during the last half of next week. "Uncle Moses," a drama by Sholom Asch, will be his principal offering. This company has a high reputation among followers of the Yiddish stage.

New York Guns to Fire Official Salute.

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—State department and army officials and many well known private citizens are cooperating in plans for the reception and entertainment of Prince Takamatsu, third son of the late Emperor Taisho and younger brother of Emperor Hirohito, the reigning sovereign of Japan, and Princess Takamatsu, who will arrive in New York tomorrow aboard the Aquitania for a visit to the United States.

Prince and Princess Takamatsu are Japan's royal honeymooners, who were married on Feb. 4, 1930, in the imperial palace in Tokio. They sailed on April 21, 1930, from Yokohama for Europe by way of the Suez canal for a world tour, and have visited most of the courts of Europe. After a visit to New York, Washington, Niagara Falls, Chicago, and the grand canyon, with a short stay in Canada, they expect to return to Japan in May.

The prince and princess will be greeted by the salute of 21 guns as the Aquitania, bearing the royal party, enters the harbor. This salute—the same that is fired for the President of the United States—is also fired in honor of members of reigning royal families. Under Secretary of State Benjamin Castle and Maj. Gen. Hanson E. Ely will be aboard the Macom as members of the welcoming committee. The prince and princess will be officially received at the city hall on Saturday morning.

The prince and princess will go to Washington next Wednesday and will call upon the President and Mrs. Hoover.

Yankee Adviser Tells How Siam Retains Its Own Government

The long and independent history of Siam, whose royal rulers, King Prajadhipok and Queen Rambaibarni, will visit the United States this month, was recited yesterday in a lecture by Raymond B. Stevens before students at the University of Chicago. Mr. Stevens is adviser on foreign affairs to the Siamese government, and chairman of the American Friends of Siam.

RAYMOND B. STEVENS.

Mr. Stevens mentioned in his talk that Siam never has yielded its independence to any other nation, and is the only absolute monarchy in existence. Chicago, he said in conclusion, is well known in the Orient. Mr. Stevens will deliver another lecture today, and will depart for British Columbia to meet the royal Siamese party on its arrival April 17.

386,272 AMERICANS LIVE ABROAD; BULK OF THEM IN CANADA

Washington, D. C., April 9.—[Special.]—Estimates based on information submitted to the state department by its consular service indicate that 386,272 American citizens were living abroad on Jan. 1 last. Of this number 213,747 were in Canada, 84,309 in Europe, 20,795 in the West Indies and Bermuda, and 1,809 in Russia.

The figures included only those whose residence abroad has a permanent or semi-permanent character. It does not include tourists or others whose presence abroad was considered to be only transitory.

France leads all European countries in attracting Americans. The figures show that 25,961 Americans reside in that country. A total of 8,600 live in Great Britain and Northern Ireland, 7,830 in Czecho-Slovakia and 17,965 in Portugal, distributed as follows: The Azores, 16,642; Lisbon, 83; Oporto, 9; and Madeira, 28. Youths Strive for Chance at Training Camp

Ft. Sheridan Applications Exceed Last Year's.

A MONTH'S outing at the expense of the government, with sleeping in tents, swimming, athletic games, plain, healthful food and supervised drill under regular army officers has appealed to the youth of Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. Thus, although two more weeks remain before the lists are closed, only slightly more than five hundred applications still can be received for this year's Citizens' Military Training encampment at Fort Sheridan.

From a total of 6,500 applicants officers of the Military Training Camps association will select 4,700 youths to receive a month's training and the chance for a commission in the reserve corps. Six thousand applications already have been received and a large number of the remaining openings are being kept for Chicagoans.

"We have twice as many applications now as we had at this time last year," Dr. George F. James, national executive secretary, said. "Although the camps have been gaining in popularity each year, as the boys go home and tell their envious friends of their experience in 'the army,' this year's response is astounding. The fine weather of the last three days has done much to enhance the prospect."

The camps will start July 28. Clothing, food, equipment and all other necessary expenses will be borne by the government. Transportation at the rate of 5 cents a mile will be paid as part of the expenses. At camp the youths will sleep in tents, roll out at the break of dawn and spend the mornings drilling, hiking and on the ranges.

Three branches of service are offered at Fort Sheridan. The infantry is recruited in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin, while the cavalry and artillery is recruited from the three states. That the old time love of the horse is not missing in modern youth is shown by the number of applicants for the mounted service.

Afternoons and special days will be devoted to swimming, boxing and competitive games. Instruction in all sports is given. Prizes for the best soldier, expert marksmanship and superiority in games will be given at the end of the period. Staff officers will conduct periodic reviews.

"There is an unprecedented enrolment in all parts of the country," President Charles B. Pike of the association said. "Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, and West Virginia filled their quota in two days. From Pennsylvania to the gulf states have twice as many applicants as the camps can hold.

"This voluntary military training has for ten years proved to be a stabilising influence, inculcating loyalty and good citizenship," Mr. Pike added. "It is much to be regretted that just at a time when many young men of fine quality are out of work, congress did not offer an opportunity for greatly increased camp attendance."

Army and Navy Display Latest Scientific Accidents.

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—Army and navy instruments displayed here tonight include a new method of determining wind velocity and direction, expected to prove of great importance to aviators and in the prediction of meteorological conditions; a cobalt steel telephone magneto—the smallest in the world; a novel type of hand anemometer; a sound ranging device which includes in its mechanism a camera capable of taking and developing pictures in three seconds. These and other exhibits were explained by speakers representing the army and navy at "Science Dinner" of the American Institute at the Hotel Astor tonight.

Five army officers and five naval officers, each an expert in his own field, were introduced to 500 members and guests of the institute by Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, United States army retired, who presided.

WHEN WORDS FAIL YUH

Young Chap, Aged 20, Feels Isolated, as He Doesn't Drink

BY DORIS BLAKE.

The reflections of the younger generation on drink and drinking are the most interesting phase of the whole prohibition mess. Interesting—and disconcerting. Never more so than when they begin to question the advisability of sitting in where the drinking goes on so as not to miss any of the fun. Let's take "Herbert," aged 20, as an example of what is meant:

"Recently," Herbert writes, "I attended a dance, escorting my best girl, who, like myself, does not indulge in any form of intoxicating liquor. Chairs and tables were arranged around the dance floor where couples retired in and between dance numbers. A conservative guess on my part figured that at least 90 per cent of the people gathered there at the tables had plenty to drink.

"We got some ginger ale and the waiter brought along a large bowl of ice. I soon discovered what the ice was for when large bottles appeared from out of the smoke laden atmosphere. There we are amidst all this hilarity and practicing temperance. Everybody was getting drunk and having a good time in the process and through all this we were cold sober.

"It sure was a trying night for me. I sure did want to join in the fun. But I resisted. I don't know whether it was worth it or not. Incidentally, that's why I'm writing you for your erudite opinion. Do you think I miss much fun by being a teetotaler? I once said I would never drink, and now I am 20 years old and so far have adhered strictly to my younger inhibitions. HERB W."

What prohibition argument needs, in my opinion, is not more evidence about its young crime makers but more testimony from the confused young Herberts, the decent young chaps who look upon the drinking scenes and with the inexperienced eyes of youth see only the glamor of the fun of it.

Hilarity, noise making, ready laughter being the ordinary expression to youth of a good time—is it any wonder these young people ask "What am I missing" and in youth's own way take the initiative to find out? We oldsters can only hope and pray that with the grace of God, and perhaps a good, strong girl influence, the nice young Herberts survive the test and "keep on adhering to their younger inhibitions."

Buyers of Perfume Are of Three Types, Says One of the Trade

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

It is interesting to get an impression from the other side of the perfume counter than the one at which we, as customers, stand. That is, from the trade point of view, which angle I get from an article in one of the toilet trade magazines.

Here we find, among other things about ourselves, that we offer a study in contrast, of extremes; that our perfume demands have changed sharply in the last decade. We are typed, in a manner of speaking, into three classifications by Edna Colladay Pierce, who speaks for the trade.

There is the positive type, the neutral type, and the negative type. The first is decisive, according to Miss Pierce. She knows what she wants. In clothes, in her home, in business, in life. She may not know the name of the perfume she wants, but it will be spicy, distinctive, unusual.

The neutral type wants the latest or the newest thing in everything else, along with the newest perfume. Being a follower, not a leader, she prefers to have things chosen for and willingly acquiesces in what she is told. She will like a full, blended bouquet, or a heady fragrance, or one of mystic sweetness.

The third type, as you may guess, dosen't know what she wants. She can be sold unbecoming clothes, perfumes and cosmetics. Easy though she is to sell, she is no triumph as a customer, easily being the most discontented and trying person to have to deal with. To make a contented customer of her the suggestion is made by the authority I quote that she be persuaded into taking a dainty floral odor, or a light bouquet, perfumes from which there is little likelihood of an unpleasant reaction.

It is interesting in Miss Pierce's article to note how the woman's home, her dress, her talents, her sophistication or simplicity, her fastidiousness, her youth and her age are all considered in perfume making and in sale advice.

Cases Show That Children Aren't Naturally Jealous

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Children are not naturally jealous of the new baby in the family. I don't say they're not jealous. I say they're not naturally jealous. Their tendency is to take easily and affectionately the new baby.

Observation is at the basis of my personal conclusion. But many deliberate experiments have been made with the situation of the first child and the arrival of the second baby and they quite definitely point the same way—that jealousy is not naturally the emotion aroused by the little brother or sister.

But jealousy often manifests itself. Why? Because some change has taken place in the first child's life after the baby is born, which makes him feel jealous. It isn't usually that his parents love him any the less. But they do something to make him feel that they do. They are the cause of his jealousy—not the baby.

They don't mean to be. They don't even know they are. They just don't sense that their small son or daughter needs to be prepared for such a big event and also to be considered after it happens.

However, it isn't always the parents' fault when a first child shows jealousy. Sometimes it's the fault of relatives who live in the family. I know of several cases where an uncle and aunt show the most shameless favoritism.

Then, too, sometimes friends and relatives who visit will actually ignore the first child or even make inane remarks about "noses being out of joint," or "not being the baby any more," etc.

Children have two ways of showing the results of unfairness when the new baby comes. One is to dislike and even hurt the baby. The other is unconsciously to sprout one or more behavior difficulties.

If we want to use the word jealousy we might say the first child shows his jealousy in these ways. But really the word jealousy does not describe his inner feelings as well as the word hurt. He is hurt—he feels a sense of loss—he is bewildered and confused by the sudden change in his status.

Children are not naturally jealous. Don't be thoughtless or unkind and rouse that emotion in them.

Spring Starts with Gayety at Virginia Spa

BY THALIA

THERE seems to be an unusually large number of Chicagoans at Virginia Hot Springs this year, and reports from the resort make it sound very gay and pleasant. Spring golf, riding, and parties apparently are the principal diversions.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. McLennan gave a dinner party at the Homestead on Wednesday night, their guests including Mr. and Mrs. George McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. George Markham, Baron and Baroness Rosenkrantz, and others. On Tuesday evening there was a birthday party for Melora Pelouze, Col. and Mrs. William Nelson Pelouze's daughter, who was a "sweet sixteen" birthday child.

Others in the Chicago colony include the Valentine Bartletts, Mrs. Ralph M. Shaw, Mrs. James M. Hopkins and her daughters, Marjorie and Kay Goodman, Mrs. George A. Ransay with Cornelia and George Jr., the E. L. Cudahys, Mrs. James P. Whedon, Miss Frances Jeffery, the Edgar Stantons, Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Hollis [their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Kirk, were to join them last week, but remained in Chicago because of the illness of Mr. Kirk's stepfather, Mr. Arthur Sawyer], Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams and their daughter, Mary Seymour Adams; Mr. and Mrs. Horace Armstrong and their daughters, Jean and Mary. Miss Jean is to play in the Dominion golf championship at the Homestead the week of April 20, in which are entered numerous outstanding women golfers.

Bertha Palmer Will Bow at King's First Reception.

Bertha Palmer was to have been in the wedding party for the marriage of Phoebe Logan and Joseph B. Terbell Jr. tomorrow afternoon, but she was informed that she was to be presented at the first of the English royal levees, and since preparations for leaving before their majesties necessitates her being in London some time before the presentation, she had to give up the idea of coming to Chicago before sailing for England. Her mother, Mrs. Potter Palmer, and she were to sail this week.

Meanwhile, Miss Logan, Mr. Terbell, and their attendants are having a busy round of gayeties. Miss Christobel Wheeler is giving a luncheon for the bride-to-be at the Casino today, and the rehearsal will be this afternoon. The Stuart Logans are giving the bridal dinner this evening at their apartment, and Betty Durham is to give a luncheon at the Casino tomorrow. Mr. Terbell and his bride are going to Bermuda on their honeymoon, and have taken a house in Highland Park to occupy when they return.

Members of The Tavern received their announcement yesterday for the "April Fooleries" of 1931, to be given on Monday night, April 27, at the Goodman. I understand that rehearsals and committee meetings are being held every day, and a great deal of spirit is going into the planning of skits and sets and all. Arthur Bissell is chairman of the committee, and George Dickson and Frank Breckinridge are doing most of the lining up and training of talent. Secretary Charles Collins' announcements say that the second "April Fooleries" will be of The Tavern, by The Tavern, and for The Tavern—a roistering, Aristophanic travesty of the life of the club and the town. Our amateur actors, authors, and stage directors are putting their most poignant yearnings and furious frustrations into the production of this frolic."

Some Travels, Spanish Dancing, and Other Interesting Things.

Here and thereabouts—The W. Tracy Aldens are to depart next Wednesday for White Sulphur Springs, to be gone until May 14. . . . Mrs. Arthur Bissell and Miss Adela Barrett departed on Wednesday for a trip of several weeks through the Shenandoah valley. . . . Miss Lucy Martin has returned from a motor trip to French Lick Springs. . . . Miss Clara Lake has returned from a sojourn of several months in Jamaica.

Every one who knows the amazing story of how Mrs. Mellen C. Martin "took up" the study of Spanish dancing, and of how she became so proficient in the art that she has appeared with glowing success in Seville, dancing the "Sevillanas," traditional dance of the city, with professionals, will be going to see her dance on Friday evening, April 24, at the Civic theater. She and Mrs. Adolph G. Domingues, wife of the Mexican vice consul, are to give a Mexico-American good will program.

Although Mrs. Domingues has sung at various gatherings and Mrs. Martin has danced at private parties, neither of them has appeared publicly in Chicago before. Not only has Mrs. Martin studied assiduously the dances of Spain and their interpretation, but she has also acquired copious knowledge of other matters Spanish. Well known Spanish visitors, among them Andres Segovia and José Iturbi, have said that the Martin house in Winnetka, a faithful and exact copy of an Andalusian dwelling, is "more Spanish than Spain."

Kaleidoscope—Dorothy Aldis is to speak at the luncheon to be given by the alumnæ association of the National College of Education for the senior class of the college at the Chicago Woman's club tomorrow. . . . The Drama league's little theater tournament will hold its 5th annual preliminary matinees on May 4, 5, 6, and 7, and the finals on Sunday evening, May 10. . . . Dinner party hosts and hostesses preceding the Lower North Community council party next Friday evening at the Bendix gallery include Muriel Winston, the Cyrus Hills, the W. Paul McBrides, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Cramer, who are entertaining for Angela Johnston and her fiancé, Willard Boyden; Mrs. Earl Hambleton, and the Randolph S. Paysons, who will have a number of other committee members as their guests. . . . Mrs. Walter S. Brewster is arranging the tea table or tables for the Antiquarians' Guelph treasure tea this afternoon, and will receive with Mrs. Chauncey McCormick. . . . The Arthur Meekers and the Howard Gillettes are giving their party to celebrate Mr. Meeker's and Mr. Gillette's birthdays at the Casino tonight. . . . The grand march at the Naval ball at the Naval reserve armory this evening will be led by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Walter S. Crosley, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank Parker, and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Manus McCloskey.

To Prairie Club Hikers.

The public is invited to join members of the Prairie club tomorrow on a hike from Forest Glen to Edgebrook. On Sunday the club has scheduled a walk from Fox River Grove to Carpentersville.

The marriage of Miss Eleanor McDonnell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McDonnell of Evanston, to John Clyde Stewart, son of Bishop and Mrs. George Craig Stewart, took place last Tuesday afternoon at St. Luke's church in Evanston. After a trip to California the bride and groom will reside at 553 Hinman avenue, Evanston.

Brangwyn's Art on Display at Local Gallery

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

ONE of the most important exhibitions Chicago has had this year is that of paintings and water colors by the great British colorist, Frank Brangwyn, current in the Carson-Pirie-Scott galleries and to continue to April 25. For the first time in a decade, more or less, we are confronted with Brangwyn's original work. It is true that lithographs and reproductions, even a few etchings, have been seen in various exhibits through the years, but mainly we have kept up the Brangwyn tradition through hearsay.

We have heard of his murals in London; we have heard of his great paintings; we have heard of his delicate coloring in renderings of architectural subjects. Brangwyn has nearly vanished as a man in the stories which color his reputation.

Now at one glorious blow, Brangwyn the painter is put down in our midst. Here is original work that we ourselves may estimate. Here is the painter as firmly responsible for his pictures as our painters in Chicago are for theirs. In everything but the flesh Brangwyn is present. And, really, with the gorgeous canvases spread in the Carson gallery, a Brangwyn in the flesh would be the little bit too much. Already we are prepared to take off our hat and give due reverence; no living presence would better untie our tongue, it might in fact call a halt on some of the eulogies we are prepared to offer.

It is hard to praise a person to his face without being conscious of the possibility that some of what you say is flattery, undue, uncalled for. In the present instance, Brangwyn away, flattery can run riot and fearlessly proclaim the good it sees. For instance, the striking picture of the "Swineherd," perhaps the most impressive in the group: here is a fine, a brilliant piece of work. Then the smaller "Old Houses at Limehouse," its delicate, variegated facade is fascinating in its values; and the "Yellow Dahlias," a rich banquet of glowing petals; and the "Mendicant," a great piece of character drawing; and "The White Peacock," delicate and delightful in composition. From these to the water colors, among them "Pont Henry IV over the Vienne at Chatelrault," one of the loveliest in coloring and handling, but all of them intriguing.

Brangwyn has received nearly every honor a painter may be given in this world. His fame is worldwide. On this score and on the merit of the present pictures, his exhibition is doubly, triply, well worth a visit.

THE SIXTH JOURNEY

BY ALICE GRANT ROSMAN

SYNOPSIS.

John Falconer, a successful architect returning home to England from Cape Town, meets Hilary Revel, author of travel books, on shipboard. During the journey home their acquaintance grows into a friendship neither wishes to end.

John tells Hilary of his daughter, Judith, born of a café singer while he was a soldier. His wife, John says, magnanimously adopted the child. Hilary suspects such magnanimity. John's sister, Gertrude, became Judith's legal guardian when his wife died.

Hilary had taken her war-invalided brother, Hugh, who had just died, away from home ten years ago to give her younger sister, Christine, and brother, Stephen, a better chance. Hilary's stepfather is the only sympathetic member of her family.

Shortly after their return John and Hilary become engaged.

Judith leads a lonely life in her aunt's home. Her cousin Prue is her only friend. She has a private teacher, Miss Mead, while her cousins are away at school. Her father she knows as Uncle John. She senses she is different in some way from other children.

When Aunt Gertrude hears of her brother's engagement she sends Judith to the country. John is uneasy about Judith not being in school. He thinks it unfair to drag Hilary continually into the question of the child and Hilary feels that he has had enough interference in caring for Judith. John writes Gertrude for the truth. She replies that she cannot, as a decent citizen, send a waif of dubious parentage among other children.

Judith, at the farm of her former nurse Tracy's brother, is badly treated by the old servant. She has had no mail since her arrival. She meets Clive Harpenden, the little master of the home where she delivers cream for Tracy. Judy writes secretly to Prue.

Prue meets Hilary for tea and tries to enlist her aid for Judith. Hilary's vow not to interfere makes her rebuff Prue. They run into Tim de Merreville, whom Hilary and John met on the boat home. Tim drives Prue home and makes an engagement to drive her next day to visit Judith.

Falconer leaves town on a business trip.

Prue sees and talks to Judy and is indignant at Tracy's treatment of the little girl. Hilary, thinking over the problem of Judith, decides to write to John about her, and her letter is a great relief to him.

Tracy becomes unbearably abusive to Judy, and Judy decides to break her chains and run away to Prue.

INSTALLMENT XII.

A MISSING CHILD.

Towards seven o'clock, far on the road towards Bedford, the long blue bus stopped to take up the frantically waving figure of a little girl in a navy coat and white straw hat.

"All right, missy," said the driver, jumping down to open the door. "Think we was going to pass you, did you? My! there would be trouble if you didn't turn up at school because of me."

The morning Flier had carried a week ago other small girls in blue coats and white straw hats, going back to school after their half term holiday. This one, the driver supposed, had overstayed her leave and was a bit upset about it. . . . As he snipped her ticket and gave her two half crowns in change from his bag he smiled at her kindly. Judy somehow felt safe in his hands.

Afterwards she did not remember much of the journey to London except that, passing through Haydon village, she ducked her head, glad that her seat was an inside one. Nobody took any notice of the little girl. Men read their morning papers, women going up to shop chattered together. The soft low seat was very warm and comforting and from time to time Judy slept.

Getting out at Oxford Circus, however, fright and confusion came upon her, for she did not know the way to Bloomsbury and she and Miss Mead had always been warned by Aunt Gertrude never to ask directions of strangers. Policemen alone were safe, Aunt Gertrude said, but suppose already the news was out that she had run away and the police of London were watching for her?

She could not risk it. . . . A stranger it must be. They couldn't all be thieves, thought Judy, looking for a kindly face.

"Please can you tell me how to get to Bloomsbury?"

"No 7 bus to Kingsway and then left and you'll do it. . . . No, no, here's the bus, look."

The stranger was not a thief. She shoved the little girl almost into the conductor's arms and was off.

At Kingsway she walked left as directed, hiding whenever a policeman came in sight. Now and then she asked the way again and hurrying people paused to show her or consult each other. Every one was quite helpful and kind. Running away was almost easy, Judy thought, until she came to Prue's door and met defeat.

She rang and rang. She could hear the bell echo far away, but nobody answered. Wasn't Prue at home then? Had she heard already that Judy was missing and gone to look for her? The little girl began to tremble at this dreadful thought. Desperately she pulled another bell and faced with what courage she could the stranger who presently held the door ajar.

"Please, I want Miss Prue Livingstone."

"They're out, of course, gone to their classes at this hour in the morning. You'll have to call again."

The door was banged and Judy shut outside, but at least she had comfort. Prue had gone to her classes, she had forgotten the possibility of that.

For two hours Judith crept about the square, hoping no one would notice or think it strange. She dare not let the house out of her sight and sometimes she rested for a moment or two on the steps until some sound sent her hastily away again.

Did Prue come home to lunch? Judy had never heard her say, but hoped so dreadfully. A new terror was added to all the rest. She began to grow giddy and the world danced before her eyes. She was afraid of falling down and not being able to get up again.

A car raced into the square, pulled up before Prue's house, and two girls jumped out, laughing. In a moment the car was dashing off again and Judy knew it. It was the little one belonging to the man called Tim.

She was only a short distance off and she tried to run, crying, "Prue, Prue—O, Prue!" It was like a nightmare when you can hardly move though lions are after you and her voice was so husky and faint it seemed miles away. She made one last effort, reached the steps, and saw the door close before her despairing eyes.

"Prue!—Prue!"

She reached the bell, but she could not hear it ring for the drumming in her ears. She beat with her hands on the door and tried to shout, then felt the ground sink away from under her feet. A great darkness gathered her in and she knew no more.

. . . . . .

Falconer was on his way back to London and Hilary's heart sang within her. All day she had been at Greenwood, measuring and planning and consulting with Rogers so that she could have every detail ready in her mind to answer John's eager questions. His train was due at nine o'clock and in their telephone talk the night before she had promised to meet it. He would be tired out after the journey, but in the taxi she would cheer him with news of their home-to-be, then drop him at the club and take the taxi on. He would need a good night's rest and she meant to be very firm about this, even managing if necessary. She smiled at the thought.

From her father's easy chair, where she had been loafing until it was time to dress, she heard Christine and Steven come in from a test match, arguing hotly. From snatches of their talk it appeared that one of Steven's cricket gods had been on the way to a century and Christine was certain he would never make it.

Recalling a commission the girl had promised to do for her, Hilary went out into the hall just as the discussion rose to fever heat.

"All right, clever!" said Steven. "It is now 6:10 and the news will be coming through. Just hold your tongue a jiff and we'll get the latest scores."

They went into the drawing room, where the portable wireless set stood in a corner near the door, and Steven turned the switch.

"The test match," began a loud voice out of the box.

"Half a second, Hilary," called Christine.

"I beg your pardon, ladies and gentlemen. Before I give you the rest of the news, here is an S.O.S. which has just been handed in. Missing from Beech farm, Haydon, Bedfordshire, since the early hours of yesterday morning, Judith Harris, aged thirteen years, five feet two inches in height, pale complexion, brown hair worn in a plait, dressed in a white silk dress and navy coat, panama hat, brown stockings, and brown strapped shoes. The missing child is thought to have gone out for a walk in the woods and lost her way. Will any one who has any information please telephone the chief constable for Bedfordshire, or any police station. The name is Judith Harris, aged thirteen years, missing from Beech farm, Haydon, Bedfordshire."

"Rot!" said Steven. "They get a new one nearly every night. I believe they keep a chap to make them up. Come on now, test match. Here we are——"

Hilary heard no more. She was back in her father's chair, staring straight before her, with horror in her eyes.

She could think of nothing but John coming home to such news, if he did not know it already.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Holding a Strange Arm.

My husband and I were on our way to attend the show at the neighborhood theater one Saturday night when my husband stopped at the corner mail box to drop some letters in the box for me. I walked slowly ahead and was trying all the time to strain my eyes to see what the feature picture was. I got a glimpse out of the corner of my left eye of a blue overcoat, the same shade as the one my husband was wearing. Without looking further, I reached out my left arm and caught the gentleman's arm, drew him close to me, and said, "Aw, I'll bet we won't like that picture!"

Just then my husband approached from the right and said, "S'matter, y'nuts?" I then looked around and saw that I was holding the arm of a perfect stranger. I don't know which was the most embarrassed. I could hardly distinguish his prominent red mustache as his face was a bright red, too.

London Feels Realty Boom in Its Suburbs

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 9.—The staid old lady of London is going on a real estate spree. She has a boom on which amounts to a first rate jag and, as usual in such circumstances, there is no thought about a possible headache afterward. Apparently, however, there won't be.

One of the reasons is that the London worker is becoming more and more a commuter. Consequently scenes are being enacted around the frayed edges of the old town comparable in every way to some of the expansions of Chicago, with each extension of city and suburban city transportation service calling down a land rush which might do credit to Oklahoma.

Fortunes are being made daily. Sale of farming and waste land in outer London for building purposes has worked wizardry with values. Prices range from twice to ten times the original land. Lucky landowners have benefited by no less than $500,000,000 within the last few months by the mushroom growth of suburbs, expert valuers estimate.

Some of these are well on the way toward becoming millionaires, and that means in pounds sterling.

New tube routes and construction or widening of arterial highways is responsible for most of the sudden wealth. One example is that of a subway extension which has increased the value of land near it by ten times. The line is an extension of the Piccadilly tube in the neighborhood of Southgate. Landowners there are asking as much as £5,000 an acre for plots which for farming purposes were priced at £500.

In the Edgeware district ground formerly worth £25 to £30 a foot is now going for £360 to £425 a foot. At North-East Actol land suitable for stores has jumped in the last three years to £250 a foot, from a start of £50 a foot. The population there within the last few years has increased from 600 to 20,000.

But it isn't only on the outskirts that London is doubling and trebling its value. Inside the city itself an equally surprising transformation is going on. This is partly due to the fact that a number of old leases have expired within the last five years. Sites in and near the West End are changing hands at as much as eight times the price which they brought five years ago.

Nobel Prizes Advance.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, April 9.—(AP)—The five Nobel prizes will set a new high record this year, the Nobel foundation has just announced, each award being worth 173,206 kronor [$46,420]. Last year the prizes amounted to $46,350 each, and in 1929 to $46,299.

And Now Tailored Suits for Evening

"DOROTHY DULIN" "PARIS"

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Tailored suits, divided skirts, and 100 per cent feminine lacy frocks are hotly disputing for first place in the new Paris fashions.

The result will be, as you suspect, that any and all of them will be good, sartorially speaking, provided they suit your type, for the first and last style commandments of 1931 are: "Thou shalt dress becomingly."

Divided skirts are, as I have already told you, one of the biggest features of spring and summer fashions and there are so many versions of them being shown by the leading couturiers that it's hard not to find one you like.

A brand new style idea is Redfern's divided skirt evening suit, sketched today. It really unites several ideas. The tailored suit for evening, which you know is being sponsored by Patou, Talbot, and Ardanse, among others; the trouser skirt, sponsored by almost everybody except Lelong, and the feminine transparency, universally featured.

This Redfern evening suit is in pale green broadcloth. The trousers begin bursting into circular fullness a little above the knees and by the time they reach the floor they're wider than most skirts. The collarless broadcloth jacket is very wide open in front, a point characteristic of many smart jackets. It has three-quarter sleeves and inside pockets.

Femininity is upheld by the short slip-on tunic blouse of cobweb black Chantilly lace, utterly transparent, with its softly draped bertha and frilly peplum. A green velvet ribbon tied in front defines the natural waist.

Both DeLamarter and Stock Conduct During This Concert

BY EDWARD MOORE.

THE Chicago Symphony orchestra popular program divided itself in the matter of conductors last night at Orchestra hall. Eric De Lamarter wielded the baton in the symphony, Beethoven's Second, giving a performance that had both melodic outline and rhythmic force. Then, after the intermission, Frederick Stock appeared to conduct for the soloist of the evening, Lois Bichl, cellist, who played the Saint-Saëns Concerto in A minor.

The work would seem to be the season's best seller for cellists. Most of those who have applied for public acclaim this year have done so on the strength of what they could accomplish with it. Miss Bichl is an artist of technical competence and musicianly imagination. She approached it with confidence and projected it with fine pace and tone, thereby proving herself one of the foremost to have attempted it. Other numbers on the program were Smetana's "Vysehrad" and the Finale from Wagner's "Das Rheingold."

Margaret Sihler, contralto, and Robert F. Scanlan, pianist, were the two of the Young American Artists series at Kimball hall last evening. In Rameau's "The Three Hands," Dandrieu's "Les Tendres Reproches," and Schumann's "Papillons" Mr. Scanlan displayed many of the pianistic virtues of tone, touch, technical ability, and artistic sympathy, lacking only the physical, dancelike appreciation of rhythmic impulse to make a complete success of the Schumann number. Miss Sihler, it must be confessed, is at present in somewhat too early a stage of her artistic career to have registered fully what she will be able to accomplish after a later and more thorough study of the art of song.

A bandmasters' convention tending toward bigger and better things in band programs is now in session in Boston. Special band numbers have been written by Leo Sowerby, Percy Grainger, Henry Hadley, and Carl Busch. These are to be conducted by their composers except in the case of Dr. Hadley, who is forced to be elsewhere with another assignment. His work will be conducted by Victor Grabel of Chicago.

The new works will be played by a band of eighty. Other numbers will have a group of 400 players, the Finale of the "Tannhäuser" Overture and the fourth section of Respighi's "The Pines of Rome" among them. These and others will be conducted by John Philip Sousa, Edwin Franko Goldman, A. A. Harding, and Dr. Charles O'Neill.

WOMAN'S AND MISSES' DRESS.

This accommodating little bolero dress for all occasions expresses youth and jauntiness.

It's neither fussy nor too sportive to span over the needs of an entire day. The softly falling bolero in a subtle way diminishes the width through the waist, and gives prominence to the flatness of the hipline. A printed crêpe silk in blue tones made the original of today's frock. Other schemes equally wearable are navy blue flat crêpe silk or a Roman stripe wool crêpe.

Pattern No. 3019 may be had in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years and 36 and 38 inches bust measure. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch material and 4½ yards of binding.

Cleans the scalp "sets" a wave checks DANDRUFF

WHENEVER you wash your hair—and most people do it once a week—douse full strength Listerine on the scalp either before or after the rinse. Then massage the scalp and hair vigorously for several minutes.

You will be simply delighted by the wonderful feeling of cleanness and exhilaration that follows this refreshing treatment.

Moreover, it is unquestionably one of the best treatments for loose dandruff—for preventing it, and for overcoming it once it has started.

Many hundreds of women have told us that since making Listerine a part of the weekly shampoo, their scalp feels better, their hair looks more attractive, and they are never troubled with loose dandruff.

Of course, if dandruff does get a start, it will be necessary to repeat the Listerine treatment systematically for several days, using a little olive oil in conjunction with it if the scalp and hair are excessively dry.

Listerine removes and dissolves the dandruff particles and heals and soothes the scalp. Also, if infection is present—and most dermatologists define dandruff as a germ infection—Listerine immediately combats it.

Incidentally after a shampoo when the hair is unruly there is nothing like Listerine to make it set nicely. The same applies to a finger wave.

Keep Listerine handy at home and carry it with you when you travel. Medical men pronounce it the ideal safe antiseptic. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Missouri.

Do you have to be told?
Before any social engagement rinse the mouth with Listerine. Thus you automatically end Halitosis (unpleasant breath) the one unforgivable social fault.

A MAYOR'S COOK TELLS WHAT HE LIKES AT TABLE

Spinach a Favorite in Cermak Household.

BY VIRGINIA SCHMITZ.

What does a newly elected mayor like to eat?

Well, it might be chicken soup with home made noodles or it might be spinach with just a touch of garlic. And in the case of Mayor Anton J. Cermak, it happens to be both.

Grapefruit and cereal, rye toast and a coffee substitute carried him nearly through one of the most gruelling days of his life—election day. It was a lighter breakfast than his usual one, according to Mary Fleming who presides over the kitchen of the Cermak home.

"Now usually for breakfast," she said, "he takes grapefruit or orange juice and some coarse cereal. Then maybe he wants a soft boiled egg and some rye toast or better still some bran muffins. He always likes fresh baked rolls with his meals."

Spinach Is His Favorite.

Little boys who have been told heretofore not to hide the crusts of their bread under the plate if they want to grow up to be President may now be told to eat their spinach if they want to be mayor. For spinach is Mayor Cermak's favorite dish, according to Mrs. Richey V. Graham, one of his daughters.

"He likes all kinds of vegetables," she said, "and eats very little meat, although he does like fish. But spinach with garlic is really his favorite."

And here is the cook's recipe for preparing spinach, in her own words:

"Of course, you have to clean it well first, then you cook it in salty water, and when it's tender put it through a strainer. Then you make a cream sauce with plenty of butter and add just the tiniest bit of garlic to it."

Chicken Soup Is Second.

But Mary Fleming thinks that chicken soup runs a close second for the favorite—chicken soup with egg noodles made fresh for the soup.

"He likes that for Sunday," she said. "And then there's halibut, breaded and served with a tomato sauce, and creamed beets and combination salad and celery—he likes those too."

Luncheon is Mr. Cermak's lightest meal, according to Mrs. Graham.

"He is often too busy to eat until 3 o'clock in the afternoon and then it will usually be just a plate of vegetable soup and a glass of buttermilk," she said.

The mayor's dessert requirements are simple. Jello or a frozen dessert or fruit are usually served. In fact, few fancy concoctions of any sort find their way to the Cermak table.

On New Mayor's Diet.

Cream soups, vegetables, eggs, rolls, and fish or other sea food make up the chief items of his diet, and most of these are served simply and without overmuch fuss.

A typical dinner menu would start off with a cream soup; then a salad of chopped lettuce and celery with tomatoes; halibut with mashed potatoes baked in the oven; spinach with garlic, and for dessert, frozen chocolate pudding. With this would be served bran muffins and rye bread, but no coffee.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

After washing endive, lettuce, dandelion greens, etc., put in a clean cloth bag and whirl rapidly to remove water. Mrs. H. J. L., Sterling, Ill.

Black Tea Is Green Tea Fermented: No Dyes Used

BY PAUL POTTER.

They say that even a tea tippling Englishman can have his eyes opened and his blasé countenance confounded by a trip into the bush laden Oriental countries.

For while the Britisher's "awfternoon" is utterly distracted if teatime is missed, he seems to know as little of the sources of this infused cup, drinking as he does about nine and a half pounds per person yearly, as does the average American who drinks less than a pound annually.

These tea leaves, tea balls, tea bricks, and the tea dust that have made commerce on the high seas since the early swashbuckling piratical eras, differ little in appearance from our ordinary garden variety of rosebush leaves. In fact, the Chinese will serve you a more delicate cup of tea than you have ever prepared, and afterwards you learn that they have used rose petals or chrysanthemum blossoms in the making of it.

The Beginning of Tea.

Not long ago, it was my fortune to dine with a group of these gracious Orientals in a quiet booth in Chicago's own bit of China. And that's where one can realize how delightful tea really is. Its part in the diets of these people for generations has come from turning a dire necessity into a charming social custom.

Those nations faced with the need of protecting their water supply by boiling it before drinking were the first to have decocted the delights from the leaf of the teabush. And not until about 1615 did the westerners learn of it.

Seated at this Chinese repast was the diminutive wife of the host. As hostess, I am afraid, she might have forever dissolved any desire for tea when she remarked naïvely that there was no difference between green and black tea, except that ink was used to color the latter.

Black and Green Tea.

She had piqued a reporter's curiosity. Now, after deliberate ferreting of facts, I find that these people were having a bit of inward amusement at my expense. I confront them with this information of mine, and they reply—"Yes, but most Americans seem to think black tea is colored or dyed. Please tell them the truth."

So, here and now, the truth about the mysterious difference between green and black tea is divulged to the world in newspaper columns—at least I've never seen any tea experts using such space to explain it, and the rank and file of Americans, it seems, are in the dark about this delightful drink.

Black tea is the fermented leaf; green tea is not.

It seems that in the process of stripping the bushes of their leaves every ten or fifteen days during the harvest season, the coolies either dump the green leaves into the rolling machines at once, or hang them up to ferment of themselves, then roll them—they turn dark naturally.

Both kinds are "withered" some 18 hours after the rolling, and fired at some 220 degrees to close the pores or stop fermentation. The green tea usually is fired twice to prevent any chance of this natural change of coloring.

While Uncle Sam is quite emphatic about having his pure food laws enforced, and these laws prohibit adulteration or dyeing of tea, if you want to explode the coloring fantasy, here's a test. Dry a black tea leaf between the folds of a white cloth napkin, and rub it vigorously. The dye, if any, will rub onto the cloth.

BOX FROM HOME IS WELCOME GIFT AT ANY COLLEGE

Proves Sure Way to Win Favor of Youth.

BY BETTY BROWNING.

Like manna to the tribes in the wilderness, like oysters to the walrus in "Alice," yes, like salmon to a milk fed kitten, is the box from home to the boy or girl away at school!

These are the days at the end of the spring vacation when doting parents are placing their darlings in trains, buses and roadsters with tearful adjurations to write often and study hard for those June exams. Little they reck how murkily loom the days ahead! Over are the vacation festivities, the prom season a memory, the football season half forgotten. The more fun your son, niece, grandchild or younger brother had then, the harder he will have to study now, in this time of bursting blossoms and spring fever.

Box Creates Real Stir.

All the undergraduate calendar affords in the way of relief is a stray house party, a possible baseball game or boat race, before examinations set in. Only imagine then, fond parent, aunt or uncle, grandmother, or sister, what a stir a box packed with food will cause in the sluggish current of activities. Breathes there a student with soul so dead that he will not write often and at length, much less fail to bring home straight A's in gratitude for so timely an offering?

Perhaps these concrete returns on your investment do not appeal to you. Here is a more spiritual consideration. You will be helping the student to be a gourmet! No one who has not lived on college fare realizes how atrophied the sense of taste can become. Six months will do the trick, but a single meal has worked miracles on a visiting friend or relative.

Considered Prize Dinner.

To illustrate the general character of the college diet: During the war an economy dinner, built around Boston baked beans and brown bread, was once substituted for the usual slabs of meat, piles of potatoes and pools of sauce. So enthusiastic was the reception of this honest-to-goodness meal that a decade later it was firmly established as the prize dinner of the répertoire, and even the habitual off-campus diners stayed at home the nights it made its appearance.

Moreover, in assisting the student to be a gourmet, you will be helping some one who at least tries to help himself. Numerous amateur sandwich makers go the rounds of the dormitories, with their wares every night, intent on remedying the inadequacies of the dinner. Others, more gifted in the culinary art, run small tea shops where between meals persons whose gustatory peculiarities find no outlet in the college menu revive memories of an indulgent home over savory combinations of cheese toast, butterscotch sundae, cinnamon rolls, chocolate cake, fudge, and brownies.

Crowd Hears About It.

In this state of affairs, picture only for a moment the joy which will greet your box. In the morning mail the recipient will find a red slip apprising him of his good fortune; by noon most of the crowd has heard the news.

If you have timed the arrival of your gift cleverly, it is Saturday and two methods of consumption are available. In case a quiet week-end with a trip to the movies is on schedule, probably the midnight feast will be chosen to instill a little deviltry into the program. If guests are up for the week-end, the Sunday breakfast will be in order.

If it's to be the midnight feast, pajama clad guests will begin to rally soon after the 10 o'clock bell. In one corner of the combined dining room, living room and kitchen a phonograph muffled under pillows and with a pin instead of a needle is playing "My Baby Just Cares for Me" or Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, as the case may be. The owner of the box in the rôle of chef is tinkering with a contraption intended to cook coffee over canned fire or alcohol burner, electricity being contraband; in the end that coffee will be made with water from the tap.

Chicken Big Treat.

The roommate meanwhile unpacks the box before the ravenous eyes of the guests. Whole fried chicken calls forth a murmur of appreciation from the onlookers. There is some one's favorite variety of cake. There are homemade preserves, candied fruits, and pickles, in this box, a pie, somewhat shapeless but still tempting.

Some one has brought along a box of candy, some one else has a basket of fruit. At last the feast is ready. It turns out there are no knives or forks for the chicken, but such obstacles are not recognized.

More formal preparations are demanded by the Sunday morning breakfast. There may even be a table set with a combination of two or three tea sets, and a corsage rearranged as a centerpiece. The basket may be the source of inspiration for the repast, but eggs, bacon, toast and hot coffee also are brought in containers from the nearest off campus restaurant.

This is indeed no ordinary breakfast. Cakes, pickles, cookies, chicken, pie, and fruits from the box clamor to be eaten; in fact, the eggs and bacon are in the nature of concessions to the guests. A classic campus drink always served with such a breakfast is so-called hot chocolate, made of cocoa powder mixed with water heated over the canned fire container. Into this is mixed a liberal amount of thick marshmallow cream, and more of the marshmallow is spread on bread to accompany the drink. Speaking, that is, for the feminine element of the party.

ILLINOIS GROWERS FIND NEW 'ELIXIR VITAE'—LOTS OF APPLE SAUCE

Grasping the annual spring urge that caused "grandpap" to call for his annual dose of sassafras tea, dandelion greens, rhubarb or some other homely remedy, the apple growers of Illinois are setting forth these days the merits of the sauce that is easily made of their fruit.

Fling away the cores and the skins if you wish, but cook kettles full of apples with very little water, and when well done use a strainer or sieve, these orchardists advise housewives.

A lump of butter and a little vanilla and a sweetening to taste will make the family welcome this simple yet delightful dish.

GREEN PEAS IS FAVORITE DISH OF VEGETARIANS

Now Is the Time to Plant Them.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

If green peas did not exist, so one "cordon bleu" is reputed to have paraphrased Voltaire's famous epigram, it would be necessary to invent them. And after reading the accounts of the great cynic's garden experiments at Ferney, I am inclined to believe he would not have resented this appropriation of his phrase as much as most authors resent additions to or subtractions from their text.

For even among gardeners and cooks of the eighteenth century there was a nice appreciation of the delicacy and flavor of fresh spring peas, and today, I boldly assert, there is no vegetable that is a more general favorite or appeals more strongly to the most epicurean of palates. Already housewives are combing the markets for the first batches of home grown peas and our kitchen gardeners are planting long rows of seeds that will blossom forth in a month of two in fat green pods.

There are those who believe in planting early, just as soon as the ground can be worked, while others are in favor of waiting until the weather has had time to warm the soil so the seed will germinate as soon as planted. Well do I recall the tradition cherished by a neighboring gardener that the first peas should be planted by St. Patrick's day. Just what blessing was thus invoked through the kind patronage of the Celtic saint I do not know, but our reluctant springs permitting, he sowed a small smooth pea with thankful heart and confident expectation that he would supply the household with new and "personal" peas by Memorial day.

Differ on Variety.

On the subject of variety as well as that of planting, gardeners will be found to differ, for every one of them has his avowed preference. You hear them argue the merits of Gradus vs. Telephone and of Laxtonian over Thomas Laxton. So, too, they dispute whether it is better to make successive sowings two weeks apart of one variety than to plant three or four varieties. But I venture a guess if you choose a fairly early wrinkled pea for this climate, you will not be disappointed.

Once planted and under way, the cook is the most important visitor to the garden. For after all is the pot not the honorable end of all vegetables, and may not she who presides over that final destiny have much sound advice to offer on the subject of their preparation for it? Let one who is a born cook but stroll through the kitchen garden and to her will be revealed all sorts of epicurean possibilities that the mere man with the hoe would never recognize. It is she who sees in a pint of peas and a handful of young carrots a dish fit for a king.

Time to Pick Peas.

"There is not enough of either vegetable to make it worth picking," says the man with the hoe, but the woman with the spoon knows that in cooking not only do two and two make four, but with a dash of genius they can be made to equal six or eight or ten. Hear her, too, on the value of picking peas before they are over-developed. There are so many gardeners who hold girth as the goal to be striven for, thus sacrificing much of their flavor, sweetness, and succulence. The cook knows better, for she recognizes that picked when the pods are green and full and cooked within a few hours after picking, they are as delectable a treat as the garden offers.

And when it comes to this cooking process the best queen of the ladle will tell you to put the fresh green peas in an open kettle of boiling water, just enough to cover them well, and then to watch the clock if you would have them retain their flavor and good color. Twenty to thirty minutes is the average time allowed for cooking peas, but careful attention should be given to remove them when tender and avoid overcooking. To retain the natural sweetness of peas, especially if they are slightly old, many cooks recommend adding a few of the empty pods, to be removed, of course, before serving. In the case of peas gathered very young, the pods may be eaten in the same manner as snap beans.

How French Prepare Them.

Never to throw away the water in which peas are cooked is another admonition well to remember. It is far better, if too much remains when the vegetable is tender, to evaporate it by boiling, for in so doing the minerals and flavor otherwise thrown away are retained. One teaspoon of salt should be added to each quart of water used for cooking peas, but the use of soda to make them retain their green color is unnecessary in this area. For Chicago city water is sufficiently alkaline to allow the volatile acid so harmful to the color to escape. Where water is neutral or even slightly acid, never more than one-sixteenth teaspoon of baking soda should be used for each quart of water. When ready to remove from the stove, season with a little butter, salt, and pepper, and presto, the peas are ready to be served.

The French method of preparing peas differs essentially from ours in that French chefs cover the bottom of the kettle with lettuce leaves and lay the peas on these. Very little water is used as that adhering to the lettuce after washing in addition to that drawn from it by the heat is almost sufficient. When tender they remove all the lettuce, saving the juice, however, and season the peas with cream, butter, pepper and salt.

Cream of Pea Soup.

If you are not so fortunate as to have a kitchen garden, use care in buying peas at the grocery or market for there is scarcely another vegetable that loses so much by not being fresh. Be sure to select the plump, green pods, for when shriveled or of a yellow cast they are old. The price of peas is based principally on the work required in their culture and the time taken in picking the pods. To grow them and to eat them are pleasures, but to pick them is real work.

Cream of pea soup is one of the favorite dishes prepared with this vegetable. The recipe follows:

3 cups fresh shelled peas.
3 cups cold water.
1 slice medium onion.
1½ teaspoons sugar.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 tablespoon flour.
1 tablespoon butter.
⅛ teaspoon salt.
Dash pepper.
2 cups rich milk.

Add enough boiling water to cover peas well (about three cups) and three-quarters teaspoon salt. Cook in uncovered pan until peas are tender (from 20 to 30 minutes). Drain liquid from peas. Add onion, sugar, and salt and simmer five minutes longer. Rub through a coarse sieve. There should be two and one-half cups of pulp and liquid. If not, add water. In the meantime prepare a white sauce of the remaining ingredients. Add pea puree to hot white sauce. This will provide six servings.

BY META GIVEN.

M. S. asks: "Should cake be removed from the pans as soon as it is baked or should it be cooled in the pans?"

Sponge cake and angel food should be cooled in the pan. Butter cake should not.

Leaving butter cake for two or three minutes to shrink from the sides of the pan is sometimes an advantage. But to leave it there to cool entirely is to obtain a cake wet on the bottom. I like to remove cake to a cooler, which is a wire rack with short legs. The cooler permits a circulation of air underneath and the cake cools evenly and quickly at the temperature of the room. As soon as the cake is cool it should be iced. If it is not iced it should be put where it will be away from dust and from moving air which dries cake out. Iced cake should not be put away until the icing is hard.

Cake Storage.

And this leads to another inquiry that we have had: "In what kind of a box should cake be stored—in a box with or without ventilation?" That depends upon the cake. If the cake is a kind that attracts moisture and becomes sticky on standing it is best to exclude air unless you want the cake to become more moist than it is.

A fruit cake is better for acquiring some moisture and for it a ventilated box is the best. The fruit in cake as well as honey or brown sugar contains an invert sugar that attracts moisture, and additional moisture can come only from the air. Of course, no cake should be placed in a position where circulating air continuously passes over it, for that would certainly dry out any kind of cake.

Fruit cake is the only kind of cake that improves with age.

For Fluffy Mashed Potatoes.

Mrs. F. D. asks: "Why do my mashed potatoes always contain a few lumps even though I beat them hard? I have friends who serve the fluffiest of mashed potatoes without a trace of lumps." I suspect Mrs. D.'s equipment for mashing and whipping potatoes is at fault. And her friends no doubt use either a wooden masher or a potato ricer and a spoon to whip the potatoes.

It is almost impossible to get all the lumps out of some potatoes with a wire masher and it stands to reason that the wires cannot always hit the lumps. But lumps cannot escape the force of a wooden masher or a potato ricer. If you do not own a ricer, I recommend that you buy one. It will prove an indispensable help in the preparation of many foods. When you rice potatoes first rinse the ricer with boiling water to warm it up. Then the potatoes keep hot and the work will go faster.

Provides Base for Many Palatable Dishes.

Housewives can be compared to small boys who gather motley arrays of marbles, fish hooks, and sundry devices in their pockets. For average housewives, says Miss Hazel Thomas of the home economics department of North Dakota Agricultural college, use ice boxes, pantry shelves, and refrigerators to gather miscellaneous assortments of leftover foods.

Careful survey of these leftover foods before planning meals for each day will indicate possibilities for palatable dishes that will increase the economy of the home, according to Miss Thomas.

Good for Cottage Pie.

"Suppose the housewife were to find in her ice box a dab of jelly, some creamed chipped beef, a cold baked potato, a few slices of bacon, a helping of baked beans, a cup of stewed tomatoes, and some cold beef steak. If served as a cottage pie the steak will make an attractive and palatable dish.

"First cut it into cubes about one-half inch square and heat with left-over gravy or drippings in a frying pan. Pour this hot gravy mixture into a casserole and over it heap hot, fluffy, freshly mashed potatoes. Dot with butter and place in a hot oven to cook for 10 minutes. Sprinkle with paprika and serve hot.

Bacon Goes in Salad.

"The bit of jelly may nicely serve as a garnish for rice pudding or blanc mange for lunch. By adding a little milk to the creamed chipped beef, heating it and combining it with scrambled eggs, a tasty dish is obtained. The slices of bacon may be cut up fine and added either to French dressing for a cabbage salad or to a muffin batter.

"Cold baked potatoes when cut lengthwise into sections as for French fries, and browned in drippings, make a tasty garnish for a juicy steak. Leftover vegetables may be used in stews, salads, or soups. Add water, a bouillon cube and a slice of onion to the tomatoes and beans, cook until very hot, rub through a strainer, and serve piping hot as an appetizer for dinner."

WHAT A DAY IF YOU MISS THAT MORNING COFFEE!

Perfect Cup Brightens Your Outlook.

BY FLORA MARTIN.

Hail to coffee—the king of all beverages!

Coffee ranks as one of the leading beverages served at all three daily meals. A perfect cup of coffee adds the finishing touches to any well balanced menu. Likewise an imperfect cup can ruin an otherwise carefully planned meal.

At breakfast time coffee shines out in all of its glory. Almost every one feels down on the world in general after having been awakened out of a sound sleep and routed out of bed to meet another day of work. However, a good cup of coffee smooths your ruffled disposition. It gives you added impetus and enables you to face your family and business associates with a broad grin.

Grouchy if Cup Is Missed.

Usually the grouch you meet during the course of the day is the man who got up too late for his morning cup of coffee. Or maybe he got a dose of bitter, warmed over coffee. Nine times out of ten the lack of a good cup of coffee is the cause of his grief.

We all have our own ideas of a perfect cup of coffee. Most of us will agree, however, that a fragrant aroma and the right amount of natural oil gleaned from the finely ground coffee bean are factors which help to make coffee appetizing.

The trick of making good coffee narrows down to its cooking. Many times a coffee failure can be traced to the fact that it has been allowed to boil and percolate aimlessly without the proper care and watching. This method of preparing coffee seldom proves a success. Cooks who know their coffee and are familiar with its eccentricities take particular care to bring out its good qualities in the cooking.

Second Cooking Ruins Coffee.

Some cooks in an attempt to economize try to eke additional portions out of the coffee pot by adding more water and using the same grounds to prepare an extra supply. The taste of the fresh and unadulterated coffee is sadly lacking. By this method all of the qualities that make up a good cup of coffee are destroyed. Neither the richness of cream nor the sweetest of sugar can disguise the bitter taste of this makeshift beverage.

True coffee lovers insist that the taste is spoiled by percolating, boiling or steeping. According to them, the best coffee is made with water which has been heated to a few degrees below the boiling point. Cooking the coffee in metal pots of tin, copper, or iron adds little to its flavor, as a metallic taste is absorbed from the pots.

Many cooks in restaurants and even in homes are getting away from the method of brewing coffee in the old fashioned coffee pot. Percolating, boiling and steeping become obsolete expressions as far as their relation to coffee is concerned in this new process.

Vacuum Method Good.

Either gas or electric stoves can be employed in this modern way of making coffee. Two odd shaped glass containers are used. The water is poured into the lower bowl, and into the other bowl, which is fitted into it, the finely ground coffee is placed. A glass tube, which is connected with the upper bowl, extends down into the water. As the water heats a vacuum is created and the water rises through the tube and mixes with the coffee in the upper bowl.

When the greater part of the water has risen to the upper bowl, the heat is turned off. As it cools off the liquid will return to the lower bowl. A piece of flannel-like cloth, which is placed in the openings between the two jars, acts as a filter.

After the upper bowl, which is filled with the dried coffee grounds, has been removed, the coffee may be served from the lower bowl, which is much like a pitcher in appearance. If the spout is properly covered and it is replaced on a heater at a low temperature, it will not only keep warm but also will retain all of its good qualities. After the water has been heated, this process takes less than three minutes.

Cows to Milk on Porch—a Story of Cleanliness

BY FRANK CIPRIANI.

Way back when—in fact, in the early years of the present century—the old neighborhood milk vendor was a common sight. Driving a spavined nag and sitting on a squeaky wagon or cart, he made his every day tours calling out his dairy wares.

On his vehicle generally stood two or three large metal cans which rolled and clinked together as he drove through uneven streets and alleys. From these cans he poured out pint and quart measures of milk, sometimes just as cloude of dust were swirled his way by breezy gusts.

Today all this is changed. The old-time milkman has been supplanted by the modern milk salesman. The old milkman typified the days of milk virtually direct from cow to consumer. The new milk salesman typifies all that is new and healthful, in which sanitation and safeguards to insure a pure product are routine.

The Source of Supplies.

A study of any of the many bottling and pasteurizing works of Chicago's larger dairy companies tells the story of the transition. They are all spotless, orderly, sanitary. Such a study was made at a new plant just opened in River Forest. It is representative of what goes on so the city family has its daily milk delivery.

This, however, is incomplete without mentioning the original source of milk supplies. All around Chicago are hundreds of small and large farms whose sole purpose is to furnish raw dairy products. These farms, owned individually, are governed by state and local regulations, such, for instance, as those which disallow the keeping of diseased cows. The various milk companies retain corps of inspectors who visit these farms regularly to maintain sanitary conditions.

Moving Thermos Bottles.

The farmers send their morning milk supplies to central points. Sometimes they are delivered to the bottling works by train. Today many dairy companies operate fleets of milk carriers. These fleets consisted of extra large automobile trucks which are in reality moving thermos bottles. On these trucks are tanks made of glass, heremetically sealed and kept at a maximum temperature of 38 degrees above zero. They have an average capacity of 50,000 pounds of raw milk, or the aproximate equivalent of 26,000 quarts.

Trips of varying lengths up to 75 miles are made by these vehicular thermos bottles and end at the bottling works. There the supplies are drained and the glass tanks are washed and sterilized and ready for another rural journey.

Tested and Pasteurized.

The milk shipment just delivered next undergoes a rigorous scientific test in the plant laboratories. Approved, it continues its flowing into elaborate pasteurizing units, where it is kept for 30 minutes at a heat of 145 degrees. This treatment kills all harmful organisms in the milk.

This done, the milk is rapidly cooled by electric apparatus to a temperature between 36 and 38 degrees. The next stages are equally rapid. The white stream filters into sterilized glass tanks to the bottling machines. These machines automatically fill the different sized bottles and seal them hermetically. The bottling capacity is about 25,000 an hour, or more than 400 a minute. At no time in the bottling and pasteurizing works is any of the milk touched by hand. During the various processes laboratory examinations are made.

The separation of milk and cream is accomplished by intricate separating machines. The raw milk from which cream is extracted does not go to the consumer. It is labeled skim milk and is sold back to the farmers for stock feed or to packers to be transformed into white dry and powder form. Milk sold to consumers contains the same quantity of butter fat, from which cream is derived, as the milk used for the extraction of cream.

Bottles Washed Seven Times.

Throughout all the bottling plants is a rigid code of cleanliness. Attendants are attired in white and are under constant supervision. Even the air is washed and filtered so no dust may pollute the milk supplies. Similar cleanliness rules in the use of bottles. Every returned bottle is washed seven times. The first four soakings are in hot caustic or lye water. Next it goes through revolving brushes, followed by a hot water rinsing and a final cold bath. Every day the plants are thoroughly cleaned, including the interiors of the many tanks, separators, pasteurizers, and bottling units.

The bottling of milk is one of the final stages of the story of modern milk. The glass containers are packed into crates and moved automatically into refrigerators, where the temperature is kept at between 36 and 38 degrees. They are then ready for the white milk wagons. But before being loaded in these wagons the crates are packed with ice to insure a cold temperature.

BONES, MUSCLES THRIVE ON EGGS AND MILK DIET

Strong bones, hard teeth, and good muscles can be found in a diet that includes a large proportion of milk and eggs. This is the opinion of Miss Lelia Ogle, nutrition specialist at Ohio State university.

Suggestions for serving these two foods are to use them in inexpensive custards also containing sugar and flavoring. In addition to palatable food, all members of the family will benefit from what is considered an adequate supply if vitamins.

"As custards are made of milk and eggs," says Miss Ogle, "care should be taken not to cook them at too high a temperature. When the mixture gets too hot the custard will curdle. In baking a custard the cups or bowl should be placed in a shallow pan of water and the heat of the oven be kept low so that the water in the pan does not boil. This helps in giving a firm, fine textured custard.

"When making a soft custard it is a good idea to cook it over water and not to allow the water to touch the pan of custard. Oftentimes a delicious dessert may be made by pouring a soft custard over fresh or dried fruits. It may also be used as a sauce for gelatin, sponge cake, or gingerbread.

"If a baked custard is served, pleasing variations may be obtained by adding nutmeg, cinnamon, caramel, maple sirup, chocolate, raisins, or cocoanut. When maple sirup or caramel is added the sugar may be omitted."

Pot Roast of Beef Is Good Week-End Buy

In its regular weekly report, issued for the guidance of consumers, the committee on marketing information of the Chicago Meat Council states: "Pot roast of beef is recommended to the housewife of Chicago as a most economical meat buy over the coming week end. Roasts from the chuck or shoulder now are available at unusually low prices. Round steak and shoulder steaks also are selling at attractive levels."

HOW TO PREPARE FISH, PRESERVE APPETITE FOR IT

Select the Best and Use Variety in Cooking.

When purchasing fresh fish, housewives are cautioned by Ruth M. Dawson, nutritionist at the North Dakota Agricultural college, to look for gills of a bright red color, eyes that are bright and full, and firm, springy flesh.

"Fish is a valuable and often inexpensive entree," she declares, "and its worth as a source of necessary minerals, especially iodine, is becoming more known and accepted among homemakers. By purchasing only the best quality and using variety in its preparation, one can be sure of not spoiling the family's taste for fish."

Frying a Favorite Way.

One of the favorite ways of cooking small fresh fish is by frying—either browning in a small amount of fat or immersing in deep fat to cook and brown, Miss Dawson asserts. Larger fresh fish are occasionally cut into pieces to be fried, but are more palatable to some when baked whole with stuffing, and with strips of salt pork or bacon placed over the top to keep the fish moist.

Many tasty dishes are secured by combining vegetables such as tomatoes, carrots and potatoes with fish. They may be creamed or baked.

Some Reliable Canned Brands.

"If it is not possible to buy fresh or frozen fish at the market," she advises, "there are always reliable brands of canned fish to be had. With the exception of a slight loss in flavor during canning, this gives the same easily digested protein and the valuable minerals found in fresh fish. With a thought to sauces and seasonings, the housewife can make the canned product as appetizing as fresh fish, taking care not to let the sauces overtop the natural flavor of the fish."

As an example of the variety and tastiness one may secure from canned fish, Miss Dawson offers this recipe:

One pound canned salmon, 2 cups mashed potatoes, 1 egg, 2 cups medium white sauce, 1 cup canned peas, dried bread crumbs, 1½ teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper. Remove the bones and skin from the salmon and flake. Add the potatoes, salt, pepper and egg well beaten. Mix this thoroughly and form into cutlets. Crumb these, dip into egg and crumb again. Then fry them in deep fat until a golden brown. Arrange on a platter and surround with white sauce to which the heated peas have been added. This will make six servings.

Prices of Vegetables Due to Come Down Soon

BY EVERETT SWINGLE.

To the uninitiated it would seem that Chicago, even with its population of millions, must have an unusually large appetite, although the established wholesale dealer complains that apparently folks don't eat as much as formerly.

Yet thousands of trucks rumble through the streets of the South Water market, hundreds are parked in the Randolph street market, traffic is heavy in the produce terminal at 22d and Ashland avenue and at the fruit auction, the Wood street potato terminal and the yards at Canal and 27th streets.

Some Prices High.

The business of eating keeps apace, it seems, with the business of bargaining for and distributing foods of all kinds. Fresh fruits and vegetables have become year around commodities for all classes.

"Of course," says W. H. Hall of the federal government's market information bureau for fruits and vegetables, "there are periods when some of these foods coming from the farthest states are in or approach in price the luxury class."

Strawberries since the first of the year have been at least on the edge of being classed a luxury. They have been coming from Florida. But this week saw shipments starting from Louisiana, a little closer to this metropolis and more reasonable prices have been placed on them.

Small Supply on Hand.

Chicago had 10 cars on track during one day this week. In other years this would have been such a small supply as to have caused them to be sold wholesale for around $5 a crate, but the expectation that more and heavier shipments are to follow kept the price down around $3.50 to $3.75 per crate, market men reported. Arkansas and Missouri berries won't be far behind Louisiana.

The same holds true of rhubarb. So far it has been nearly all hothouse except for shipments from near the Mexican line, but in a few weeks southern Illinois will start shipping field grown "pieplant" into Chicago and the price will come down accordingly, it is predicted on the basis of other years.

Is it cucumbers you want? They, too, have been a hothouse product for many weeks and the present price is expected to speak for itself until field grown cucumber oust the demand for the higher priced hothouse product.

Potatoes Going Up.

Potatoes may be found to be higher in price within a month or so, predicts Mr. Hall. His comment arises from the fact that Florida has been slow to get started in heavy shipments, while cold weather has hurt the Texas crop. In the meantime the 1930 crop sales have taken so much of the stocks of the northern and western states that dealers in Idaho have begun to ask higher prices.

Sweet potatoes from new on will be principally from Tennessee until midsummer. Yams, the cousins of the sweet potato, are still coming from Alabama and states south of Tennessee.

Cheaper onions are in sight for this year, at least until the extent of the northern states' crop can be predicted. New onions from Texas have hastened the lowering of the 1930 onion prices. The first heavy shipment was eight freight carloads last Saturday and shipments this week approached the 50 car per day mark.

Peas from California.

Green peas are practically all from California. Heavy shipments have brought the wholesale price down in the last few days, but market reports also indicate the quality has been less uniform recently. Asparagus, also largely from California, is of high quality and price reductions on the wholesale market are attributed to heavy receipts.

In addition to the man who "knows his onions," there is another federal government reporter in Chicago who handles commodities of such a nature that he might well be called Uncle Sam's "big butter and egg man." He is C. L. Pier, in charge of gathering daily statistics on the butter, egg, and cheese market in conjunction with similar branch offices located in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, and Los Angeles.

At present he is pondering the future of buttar and eggs. It is not his business to predict prices, for the futures market takes care of that. But he thinks it is apparent that cheap eggs and comparatively cheap butter are here to stay for several months.

FREE Wheeling has captured the interest and enthusiasm of America. At a single stroke, this epochal achievement has given new thrills, new safety to motoring. It is the only really new development in automobile engineering in twenty years.

No advertisement could even begin to give you an adequate description of Free Wheeling. But you'll find it easy to write a Free Wheeling slogan once you have actually driven a Free Wheeling car.

Here is your chance to win one of 1072 cash prizes—merely for writing us your impressions of Free Wheeling, what it is and does.

PIERCE-ARROW LINCOLN STUDEBAKER HUPMOBILE

alone offer you Free Wheeling with positive gear control

EVERY time you take your foot off the throttle in a conventional car your motor fights your car. Your motor should pull the car, and not be pushed by it.

You'll find, when you go Free Wheeling, that your car glides smoothly ahead on its accumulated speed without engine drag—the instant you lift your foot from the throttle.

Momentum propels you, but your car is always in gear and under complete control. That is why Free Wheeling Pierce-Arrows, Lincolns, Studebakers and Hupmobiles consume 15% to 20% less gasoline and oil. They travel 10,000 speedometer miles for 8,000 engine miles.

And because of Free Wheeling, chassis wear is cut down—repair costs are reduced.

You drive in the conventional way. But Free Wheeling with positive gear control gives you silent gear shifting at all speeds—freedom from clutch-pushing—proved gasoline and oil saving—incomparably restful, zestful motoring—and the added safety attested by public traffic officials from coast to coast.

This advertisement is more than an announcement of a $10,000.00 Slogan Contest.

To thousands who may not care to contend for these cash prizes, it is an invitation to discover the new thrills that motoring now holds, thanks to Free Wheeling.

No hearsay description of Free Wheeling should satisfy you even if you are only thinking about a new car. Free Wheeling owns the future.

Think ahead before you buy. Ask yourself: How new is any "new car" without Free Wheeling? How much will it re-sell for a year or two from now?

We know you will like Free Wheeling, but don't take our word for it—go today to a Pierce-Arrow, Studebaker or Hupmobile dealer and find out for yourself.

HAWKS WHIP CANADIENS, 3 TO 2, IN OVERTIME

5 TURF STARS STAND OUT IN RACE FOR TITLE

3 Year Old Kings Evenly Matched.

BY FRENCH LANE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Baltimore, Md., April 9.—Leading eastern 3 year olds—colts that stole the headlines as 2 year olds last season — are mobilizing at the Havre de Grace and Pimlico tracks here. It will be only a few days until they are ready to head into the most spectacular battle ever waged for a 3 year old championship.

C. V. WHITNEY.

The title struggle just ready to begin may overshadow in thrills the one which the great horses Reigh Count, Toro, Sun Beau, Misstep, and Victorian fought here when they were 3 year olds in 1928. Surely this is the finest 3 year old class since that big year.

That the day for the 3 year olds to begin their campaign is drawing near was indicated at the Bowie track this afternoon when the Kindergarten stakes, the first juvenile fixture of the season, was run. It brought victory to Portam, a son of The Porter. Marcelle was second, three lengths off the winner. Pink was third. It was the second start Portam has made and the second triumph he has scored. He won easily and was backed heavily by the big crowd.

Equipoise Is Ready.

But to get back to the 3 year olds which are attracting most attention of race followers everywhere. There's C. V. Whitney's Equipose, the Kentucky Derby future book favorite. He is at Havre de Grace near here and is ready to race. He was put through a stiff training grind at the old Bennings track near here. He will start twice before the Preakness, and one of his earliest engagements is the Chesapeake stakes.

Twenty Grand, another topliner, is also at Havre de Grace this week and is in good condition. He has been trained over the private track on the Whitney farm near Red Bank, N. J. He may need one race before he is ready for his best effort, according to Trainer Jimmy Rowe Jr.

Mate, which performed like a champion at times last year in A. C. Bostwick's silks, is at Pimlico and will be given a race there. He is training well but no exceptional speed tests have been asked of him.

Jamestown is expected at Havre de Grace any hour from George Widener's farm in Pennsylvania. He is combat with the other Widener horses but will not race here, as he is not eligible to the Preakness. The Widener people make no secret of the fact that the two big races Jamestown will be pointed for are the Belmont stakes and the Arlington Classic. They believe two victories will give Jamestown as good a claim to the championship as any of his rivals.

Vander Pool Kept Busy.

Vander Pool, unbeaten last year in eleven starts, is also at Pimlico. There is little hope among those who are bringing him up to racing condition of having him ready for the Preakness. They feel they will be extremely fortunate if they get him ready for the Kentucky Derby.

Vander Pool was one of the busiest 2 year olds in the country last year. He took part in a campaign that started at the winter meeting in Florida and did not wind up until late in the

A NIGHT LETTER from Ring Lardner

Tucson, Ariz., April 9.—"Dear Friend," writes young Willis Clough, the Tucson pitcher now with Pittsburgh, "I will mail this by airplane mail from Kansas City and hope it reaches you safe as I promised to keep you posted on how I am getting along. We are due in Kansas City in a few minutes and it sure will feel good to get off this train which we have road all the way from Frisco and I have not stepped off of the train since we started though some of the other players got off and streched themselfs at stations where we stopped 5 or 10 minutes but Paul Waner said I better stay on the train or Manager Ens would get nervous for fear the train would pull out and not leave me behind.

"Paul also toled me some news which I hope aint true namely that the Los Angeles club is not satisfied with one of the games they beat us out there and think they was entitled to 2 more runs than they got off our pitchers and has sent a protest to Judge Landis the president of baseball and demand that we go back there and play the game over.

"If we have to go back it means that we can never get to Chicago in time for the opening next Tuesday and the club will be find a thousand dollars and we will also have to counsel the rest of our games with Detroit. Besides I am sick of long rides on the train and if the news is true I think I will ask Manager Ens to send me on to Chicago to explain to the Chicago club why the rest of the boys is late."

Dublinsky scaled 134 and Bernard 130½. Dublinsky was given three rounds, Bernard six and one round was even. In the semi-windup Frankie Battaglia, St. Paul, 159, won an impressive victory over Haakon Hansen, Chicago, 156¾.

Tim Moynihan Signs as Line Coach at Xavier

SOX SCORE ONE IN 11TH; GIANTS GET TWO AND WIN, 7-6

Kamm and Appling Pound Out Home Runs.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Charlotte, N. C., April 9.—The White Sox made a valiant effort today to make it four in a row over the New York Giants, their spring companions, but their plans were thwarted. The Chicagoans carried the battle into the eleventh inning and then scored a run that at the moment was regarded as a winner.

However, there were difficulties in the Giant eleventh, among them some hits off Old Man Faber, and the McGraw athletes counted two runs for a 7 to 6 victory. They now have won seven games of 13 played.

Before the highly active eleventh was reached the lead had changed hands several times. The Sox had collected five runs, two on homers off Fred Fitzsimmons, who probably will open the season for Mr. McGraw next Tuesday. Meanwhile, the Giants had hit Garland Braxton for four runs in six innings. Then they tied it up when Faber appeared in the seventh, and this 5 to 5 deadlock persisted until Chaplin appeared in the eleventh to relieve Fitzsimmons, who was weakening as the result of his unexpected tenure on the mound.

Sox Score, So Do Giants.

The Sox collected what they thought might be the winning run in the eleventh on a single by Simons, a double by Reynolds, and a long fly by Appling.

Faber, who had thrown three hitless innings, let the slim advantage escape him. Old Red probably was a bit tired. The first jolt given him was a single by Leslie, who batted for Chaplin to start the final half. Critz aimed a fly to right and it bounced off the right field fence for a double. Leslie went to third and Jackson went in to run for him. Thus the setting for the Sox rout was completed.

As proof that he wasn't as weary as he might have appeared, Faber fanned Leach. Lindstrom bounced to Watwood, but Faber couldn't get over to cover the bag, so it went as a hit and Jackson scored. Then Terry grounded to Faber, who threw to the plate. Critz turned back to third and Henline threw to Kamm, but Critz apparently ran out of the line, and escaped tagging. Manager Donie Bush

Defeats by Bush Leaguers Make Our Cubs a Bit Grouchy

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Kansas City, Mo., April 9.—Our Cubs didn't have to play their scheduled game with the Kansas City Blues here this afternoon, the reason being that it was raining and very cold.

ROGERS HORNSBY.

A number of baseball wives arrived this morning from Chicago, bearing tidings of wonderful weather there, which made the boys forget all about the local soggy and chilly atmosphere and concentrate on their hopes that it will continue to be nice in Chicago until the National league opener against the Pirates next Tuesday.

Observers with the team have been plied at recent stops with questions about there being dissension on the Cub nine. The farther toward Chicago the caravan goes, the more insistent the inquiries. Some of the boys seem a little bit unhappy, it is true, but the somewhat ludicrous efforts at baseball playing displayed by the Cubs are set down as the reason rather than any especial grievances suspected of being in the hearts of the artists.

Make Poor Showing.

There are, of course, certain matters that will have to be corrected before the Cubs can hope to be one big happy family, but the grouches that now exist, if any, probably are based on the miserable showing of the club against bush league outfits rather than awry conditions in the Cub organization.

It is probable that the Cubs will not open the season Tuesday with the best lineup available, but Hornsby is a fair and loyal fellow and will not have it said any one has been pushed around by him.

Old timers will be given every chance to demonstrate their worth before their suspected talents are definitely listed as fading, a patience which scarcely can be criticized. The National league season is 154 games long and there will be ample opportunity for a man of Hornsby's ingenuity to shift his lineup as the various emergencies may demand.

Mr. Hornsby makes lots of money, but he is not in an enviable spot in lots of ways. He has not had the hustling in the spring exhibition series that he had a right to expect. He has hustled himself, and, although the oldest member of the cast, he has been able to overshadow many of his help in his pep and vigor, a circumstance that is reflected in the fact that he has been hitting the ball as hard and as often as he ever did in his life.

Cubs May Brace Up.

Accused at times of being a selfish fellow, Hornsby, to overcome this charge, has delegated certain of his managerial prerogatives to others. This may turn out to have been a mistake if it is an advantage to keep high priced athletes sweet and mild.

If the foregoing seems to contain innuendos, make the most of it, at least until the National league season gets under way. It is recorded in the books that other teams have been as terrible in the spring training season as the Cubs have been, only to brace and go like everything when the money games were being played.

If the Cubs continue to stumble about after the championship season is launched it will be an indication that something is amiss. Then, perhaps, trained and constant observers of the nine can offer some patent, though probably highly unwelcome, observations as to what it's all about.

Root to Pitch.

The hope is entertained that once the gong rings the talented Cubs will snap out of it and play some baseball. If the team gets off with a rush the bellyaching will vanish in thin air, and those who love the Cubs as well as the Cubs themselves will be very happy again.

Charley Root was to have started the game today, and probably will pitch tomorrow. He still will be able to get three days' rest in case he is delegated to pitch the opener.

FRANKLIN CAPPON NAMED TO COACH MICHIGAN CAGERS

Walter Weber to Assist Veenker's Successor.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 9. — [Special.]—Franklin C. The action was taken by the board in control of athletics. The board also engaged Walter Weber as an assistant coach, effective next fall.

Both Cappon and Weber are former Michigan full backs, Cappon having served in 1922 and 1923, when he rated as one of the best in the country, and Weber in 1926 and 1927. The latter shared the work with Bo Molenda and was outstanding chiefly as a defensive player. Cappon remains also as assistant to Director Fielding H. Yost. Bennie G. Oosterbaan is elevated to first assistant coach of basketball and Harry Kipke head coach of football, takes over general coaching duty after the football season, the work to include an assignment with the basketball squad during the winter months.

EARLIER CHICAGO.

DEAR Wake: News items concerning the Chattanooga girl pitcher who "fanned" Babe Ruth and Gehrig bring to mind Annie McCann, a west side girl who displayed unusual playing ability about 1909-'13.

Annie, at 15 or 16, bore a striking resemblance to Harold Gray's "Little Orphan Annie," inasmuch as she bobbed her hair and wore short skirts. Sturdy, compactly built, fast on her feet, and with a strong arm and good baseball sense, she was at one time invited by Manager Frank Chance of the Cubs to their old west side park on some special day. There she played second base during infield practice. Her throwing, especially from second to home plate, brought great applause from the crowd. She handled grounders cleanly and with the ease and skill of a major leaguer.

Annie's athletic ability was well known in the vicinity of Van Buren and California, a Cub hotbed, and a location once considered by the Cubs before moving to the north side. She appeared in the lineup of various sandlot teams. Too bad Annie's time was before the exploitation of feminine athletes, as her ability was marked.

A recent Wake article about Mangler's restaurant on La Salle street recalls the annual banquets held on the third floor under the personal direction of William Mangler. The table was made up in the form of a ship and heavily laden. The event was something to write home about by those fortunate enough to be invited.

Helper H. H. Whittier recently in a Way Back When mentioned Myrtle Peak, who rode in chariot races on the midwestern fair circuit. Wonder if he remembers the five mile relay race at Centerville, Mich. Men lifted the girls from one horse to another at the end of each relay.

After one relay they lost their grip on Myrtle in their hurry and she fell on her back on the dirt track.

Dear Harvey: The well known efficiency of the Yards, where, proverbially, packers use all of the hog but the squeal, has incited New Yorkers to establish the New York Hide exchange, where they deal in futures for hides.

OVERCOME TWO GOAL DEFICIT IN WILD RALLY

Wentworth Scores Winning Goal.

MONTREAL, Que., April 9.—[Special.]—Marvin Wentworth, right defense man of the Chicago Blackhawks, flicked a high shot past Goalie George Hainsworth's shoulder tonight and broke up the longest National Hockey league game of the season. The contest went 53 minutes and 50 seconds of overtime before Chicago beat the Montreal Canadiens, 3 to 2, to take a 2 matches to 1 lead in their struggle for the Stanley cup, the emblem of world's professional hockey championship.

MARVIN WENTWORTH.

Les Canadiens held a decided margin in the first two periods and scored twice. With four minutes of the third period remaining, Chicago tallied twice within 53 seconds, March and Adams netting the puck.

Break Down Canadien Defense.

The overtime was a close checking affair with both teams waiting for the break and missing opportunities through overanxiety. The end came when Adams, Wentworth, and Cook burst in on a tired Canadien defense. A few short passes while jockeying for position and the brilliant shot by Wentworth gave Chicago its hard earned victory and sent a disappointed crowd of more than 13,000 homeward.

In the third period the Stanley cup holders seemed to have the game sewed up. But with less than four minute to go, Gottselig slipped Mush March a pass. The little rightwinger easily whizzed the puck past Hainsworth. Fifty-eight seconds later Adams tied the score on a pass from Cook.

The teams will meet again on Saturday night, and the Hawks must be considered favorites. Provided Les Canadiens can tie the round at two games each on Saturday, a fifth and final game is scheduled for next Tuesday night here.

Gagnon Gets First Score.

The first goal came when the Hawks sent three men into Canadiens' territory. Burke broke away fast, flanked by George Mantha and Johnny Gagnon. A perfect pass from the left side was just missed by Mantha, whom Gardiner expected to take the shot. Gagnon grabbed it and whipped home an angle shot.

Immediately after the second period opened the Blackhawks burst in, and Tommy Cook fired high, the puck hitting Hainsworth on the nose. After ten minutes the goalie returned with stitches holding together the cut.

Then came Les Canadiens' second goal. Pete Lepine shot from the blue and skated between the defense to snare the puck. He circled Gardiner's net and flicked the puck out to George Mantha, who sent it into the twine.

Both teams were one short when the third period opened, but Bostrom returned after a few seconds to give Chicago a man advantage. Cook got away a sizzling shot which Hainsworth caught and threw to one side. The puck rubbed the side of the goal post on the throw but stayed outside.

The tieing scores came with dramatic suddenness. Gottselig broke at the blue line and slipped a forward pass to March, who raced in on Hainsworth and flicked home a high corner shot. A minute later Cook and Adams split Les Canadiens' defense. Adams took the puck a little to the left of the goal and burned home a shot, waist high.

Game Goes Into Overtime.

Cook was banished for tripping, but the weakened Hawks held on in the face of a four man attack. Gardiner was hurt in a rush on which Joliat missed the net by a fraction. Gardiner retired to the side nursing his ear. He returned shortly and the game went into overtime.

The overtime got under way with one man rushes which rarely penetrated the defenses. Taffy Abel almost ended the game with a high shot from center ice which Hainsworth apparently did not see until it was six feet from him. He moved fast and covered the puck.

Les Canadiens appeared to be tiring, and Chicago held a decided edge in early play in the second overtime period. Hainsworth was lucky that a pass across his net by March was missed by Cook and Adams. Wave after wave of fresh eager young Blackhawks crashed in on Les Canadiens' defense.

The Flying Frenchmen suddenly came to life with a rush that tested Gardiner. Joliat started it by flicking a perfect pass to Morenz, who in turn eased the puck over to Larochelle, who raced in on the goalie. The shot was well taken.

Marty Burke electrified the fans by netting a high shot early in the third overtime period. The whistle had sounded, however, before his shot left his stick.

Rest Encourages Canadiens.

The ten minute rest had given the Canadiens new lease of life, and twice there was a swirl of red shirts around Gardiner's net. Morenz retaliated a minor check by March and was penalized. Out came four Hawk forwards to capitalize the advantage, with Cook, Ripley, Gottselig, and Couture raining shots on Hainsworth, who fell under a mass of players to make a brilliant save.

NOTRE DAME TO RESUME SPRING FOOTBALL TODAY

Notre Dame, Ind., April 9.—[Special.]—University officials today announced that spring football practice will start here again tomorrow under the direction of Coaches Heartley [Hunk] Anderson and Jack Chevigny, assistants to the late Knute Rockne.

The suggestion was made that practice be canceled, but both officials and Mrs. Rockne thought that the late Notre Dame leader would have wanted the boys to carry on after his death. They also believed that starting practice will have a good psychological effect on the players.

Practice will continue to the end of the month, making a total of less than six weeks of work. All practice is voluntary. Several football stars are working out with the baseball and track teams.

Name Successor Soon.

The Rev. Michael M. Mulcaire, C. S. C., vice president of the university, said today that an announcement regarding Rockne's successor will be forthcoming soon.

Some 2,500 Notre Dame students, returning from their Easter vacations, packed Sacred Heart church at 7 o'clock this morning at a solemn requiem high mass for the repose of Rockne's soul. The mass was sung by the Rev. Charles L. O'Donnell, C. S. C., president of the university. The Rev. Michael M. Mulcaire, C. S. C., vice president and chairman of the athletic board of control, assisted him as deacon; and the Rev. Leonard Carrico, C. S. C., director of studies, was sub-deacon. Practically the entire student group received holy communion.

Golfers Open Season.

The Notre Dame golf squad will open its season Saturday at Valparaiso. The Irish will be fortified by the presence of all six members of last year's undefeated squad led by Larry Moller, president of the National Intercollegiate Golf association, medalist and runner-up in the national meet last year. Other returning veterans are Capt. Fran Beaupre and his brother Rus, Louis O'Shea, Bill Redmond, and Art Bradley.

Yanks Wallop Asheville, 17-4, as Ruth Hits Another Homer

Asheville, N. C., April 9.—(AP)—With Babe Ruth adding his second homer in two days, the Yankees slaughtered Asheville, 17 to 4, today in the third and final game of their series. The victory gave the Yanks a clean sweep.

Ruth's fourth homer of the year came in the second inning with Lary on base. Charlie Ruffing and John Allen divided mound duty for the winners, limiting Asheville to six hits, while four local flingers were pounded early and often. Score:

New York [A.]	245	300	030	17	19	3
Asheville [P.]	000	200	110	4	6	1

Batteries—Ruffing, Allen and Jorgens; Devaney, Burlesco, Purcell, Moon and Dil.

RED SOX BEAT COLUMBUS.

Columbus, O., April 9.—(AP)—The Boston Red Sox made it three in a row here today by defeating Columbus of the American association, 10 to 4, in the final game of an exhibition series. Percy Lee Jones and Johnny Brillheart hooked up in a pitchers' battle for the first six innings with the latter having the edge. Jones retired after the sixth, while Brillheart was driven from the mound in the eighth. Score:

Boston	100	001	232	10	14	1

Batteries—Brillheart, Kline and Connolly; Jones, Reinhart and Siemer, Bruckman.

ROBINS DOWN HARTFORD.

Macon, Ga., April 9.—(AP)—Putting on one of their typical ninth inning rallies to score six runs, the Brooklyn Robins downed the Hartford Senators of the Eastern league, 12 to 8, in the final of their five game series today. That made it three out of five for Uncle Robbie's sluggers. Score:

Brooklyn [N.]	040	000	116	12	17	2
Hartford [E.]	130	101	000	8	11	2

CARDS DEFEAT MEMPHIS.

Memphis, Tenn., April 9.—(AP)—Ernie Orsatti's home run drive in the seventh inning enabled the Cardinals to win from the Memphis Chicks, 2 to 1, here today in the windup game of the Red Birds' training trip. Jim Bottomley's double and Orsatti's wallop were made off Walter Beck, a former Browns' pitcher. Score:

Cardinals [N.]	000	000	200	2	8	1
Memphis [S. A.]	001	000	000	1	5	2

Batteries—Hallahan, Rehm and Mancuso; Beck, Griffin and Berger.

ROUSH JOINS REDS.

Cincinnati, O., April 9.—(AP)—The first workout of the season on their home grounds was taken today by the Cincinnati Reds under a sun that was much warmer than most of the weather experienced on their southern training trip. Interest of a gallery of fans was centered in the reappearance of Ed Roush, center fielder, in a Cincinnati uniform. Manager Dan Howley put the entire squad through an early spring conditioning process.

TIGERS TROUNCE PIRATES.

Decatur, Ill., April 9.—(AP)—Rain marred a pitching duel between Tommy Bridges, Detroit Tiger recruit, and Larry French, Pittsburgh left hander, here today. The Tigers emerged victorious, 6 to 4. Only one run, made by the Tigers, crossed the plate during the first six innings. The Tigers fell on Bednar, Pirate relief pitcher, for two runs in the seventh and three more in the eighth, when Stone hit a home run after Alexander had doubled to score Harvey Walker. The Pirates rallied in the ninth to score four runs off Sullivan after two were out.

Detroit [A.]	100	000	230	6	9	0

BROWNS RAINED OUT.

Wichita, Kas., April 9.—(AP)—The Browns' spring training schedule was closed with a washout today when rain prevented the final game here with Wichita. Fourteen victories in 20 games is the record of Manager Bill Killefer's club, the lineup of which even the manager says he doesn't know.

Killefer has used two teams in recent contests and a lot of the athletes are uncertain as to whether they are regulars or bench warmers.

SENATORS BEAT PHILLIES.

Washington, D. C., April 9.—(AP)—Ten hits and an error enabled the Washington Senators to defeat the Philadelphia Nationals today, 10 to 5. Four of the hits came in the third, when Catcher Rensa of the Phillies dropped the ball on a squeeze at the plate with the bases loaded, letting in two counters to add to three other runs chalked up in that inning.

howled lustily to Umpire Charley Moran about this, but the only thing Charley did was to chase the Sox boss back to the bench. Then Ott bounced to short and Critz scored the winning run while Appling was throwing to third to force Lindstrom.

Walks Produce Run.

Fatty Fitzsimmons was so generous in the first inning that the Chicago boys couldn't avoid scoring a run. Cissell opened the game by doubling to right. Simons walked, Reynolds flied out, and Eichrodt walked, filling the bases. Appling's patience also was rewarded with a walk, forcing Cissell to score.

The next time Appling appeared, in the third, he hit a home run over the right field wall. This gave the Sox a 2 to 0 advantage.

Braxton's pitching baffled the Giants for three innings, but in the fourth the Giants crowded three runs across the plate. Two were out when Terry lined a single to center. Ott walked. Marshall lifted a high fly to right center, but Reynolds couldn't get his hands around it. The ball dropped for a double, Terry and Ott scoring. Vergez then hit the right field fence for two bases, Marshall scoring. Braxton closed the inning by slipping across a third strike on O'Farrell.

Kamm Knocks Home Run.

The Sox moved out in front again in the fifth. After two were out Watwood survived on a fumble by Vergez, who, by the way, has given no indication of being the third baseman McGraw expects him to be. A moment later Kamm straightened out one of Fitzsimmons' hooks and it went over the left field fence for a homer.

The Giants bounced right back in the sixth and tied it at 4 all, when Lindstrom doubled and scored on Marshall's single.

Both teams counted once in the seventh. The Sox collected their run on Appling's double, followed by Marshall's error on Watwood's grounder. A fielding slip also helped New York to its run. Faber began to work in this inning and the first thing that happened to him was Appling's muff of Fitzsimmons' pop-up. Critz's single, a pass to Lindstrom, and Terry's fly moved the run home. The bases still were filled when Marshall rolled to Cissell for the third out.

The baseball circus moved over to Norfolk, Va., tonight and will put on the one act show there tomorrow before going to New York to close the tour with two week-end games. Bush may let Moore and Frazier pitch tomorrow, and again he might use several fellows, giving each about two innings of labor. Mitchell probably will start for the Giants.

WATCH CATS AND DOGS TO PROTECT PHEASANT, QUAIL

Land Owners Must Guard Against Attacks.

BY BOB BECKER.

With the approach of the nesting season for both song and game birds, it is time for outdoor fans and landowners to wage war against the revolting house cats [they no longer belong to any house] and stray dogs which hunt on their own and disturb nesting pheasants and quail. Both of these pests take heavy toll from our wild population every year.

According to Claude Hunt, game farm inspector for the Missouri game and fish department, a sportsman may use his daily bag limit of quail every time he kills a house cat found hunting in field or meadow. Missouri urges all sportsmen and landowners to do their part in curbing the depredations caused by common house cats gone wild. The New York department of conservation put a ban on the roving felines some years ago and many other states, which are alert to the benefits of predatory animal and bird control, are constantly engaged in campaigns which result in the extermination of vagabond house cats.

Cats Kill More than Hawks.

The Missouri game and fish department made a check up last year on the results of its pheasant rearing projects. Down there the game farm distributes pheasant eggs to farmers, a program which we also have here in Illinois. According to the 1,600 farmers who reported on their success with the pheasant hatchings, the toll of young chicks taken by house cats was greater than that suffered from the raids of hawks.

Even in Chicagoland we have an immense population of that notorious bird killer, the house cat. Some idea of the number preying upon bird life can be imagined when one landowner of 40 acres trapped 21 prowling house cats on his property in the course of a year. Incidentally, the agriculturist is depriving himself of a lot of valuable feathered assistants if he permits cats to roam undisturbed on his property. They kill and keep away many song birds which aid materially in destroying insect pests.

Homeless Dogs Worry Pheasants.

Homeless dogs and even well bred canines that are supposed to have good manners are doing a lot of damage to pheasant nests by being allowed to run wild through the fields at this time of the year. Many species of dogs, which are not classed as hunting breeds, learn the fun of running into a pheasant nest and become confirmed nest hunters. We have watched these destroyers of our pheasant crop as they carefully worked a field back and forth on a line.

The need for killing stray cats in towns and villages is almost as urgent as a campaign against them on farmland. If you want wrens, robins or other worthwhile bird neighbors it is necessary to pop off the cats around your place and now is the time to do it.

British Look Over Ryder Cup Talent

LONDON, April 9.—(AP)—Upsets and surprises were plentiful at the first spring showing of British golfing styles in tournament play at Roehampton today. Seventy-four professionals attempted to squeeze through qualifying rounds that permitted only sixteen to enter match play stages tomorrow and Saturday.

Ordinarily this meet isn't such an important affair, but with all the British Ryder cup possibilities competing, interest was increased.

Perry Leads Field.

Arthur Perry of the Leatherhead led the field with a pair of 68s for 136. C. H. Gadd of the Branoepeth Castle club and Abe Mitchell were second with 137s. Gadd carded a 67 for the afternoon round to set a course record.

Arthur Cotton, who won't join the Ryder cup team except on his own conditions, wasn't accurate enough around the greens and tonight occupies a somewhat embarrassing position. He refused to join the squad unless he was permitted to remain and tour the United States in the event that he won the American open championship instead of returning immediately to England with the remainder of the team.

Duncan, Compston Out.

Most of the Ryder cup eligibles showed their worth today, although George Duncan and Archie Compston failed to qualify. One of the attractions of the Roehampton event is the appearance of the old timers, Harry Vardon, J. H. Taylor, Ted Ray, and Alex Herd.

The qualifiers following the first three were:

R. A. Whitcombe and Fred Robson, tied with 138s; Aubrey Boomer and C. A. Whitcombe, with 140s; George Ohe, 141; H. C. Kinch and Mark Seymour with 142s; and R. G. Wilson, H. C. Jolly, M. Bingham, George Gadd, W. T. Twince, O. Sanderson, and B. Hodson, all tied at 143. One of the seven having 143 will be eliminated in a "sudden death" match before the match play opens tomorrow.

WOOD, SHIELDS, ALLISON ON U. S. DAVIS CUP TEAM

New York, April 9.—(AP)—The United States Lawn Tennis association today selected Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., Frank Shields of New York, and Sidney B. Wood, now a student at the University of Arizona, to represent the United States against Mexico in their first round Davis Cup series to be played at Mexico City May 1, 2 and 5. Allison is a veteran of Davis Cup play, but Wood and Shields are newcomers to the American team.

A Ring.

On it slipped that cool
Unsuspecting little Ring.

Wedded us, joined us
Each to the other
During this long life, till Death do us part!
Instilling in us the Ne'er to be forgotten awe of God, our Maker.

Ring, may you and all you mean
In both our lives, remain ever
New, untarnished, pure as

We note where Outfielder Carl Reynolds of the White Sox changed his stance at the plate and boosted his batting average forty points. That's just about the number of strokes we'd like to take off our score if some one could devise a tee stance suitable to our peculiar variety of golf.

Medalist Goes to Semi-Final at Pinehurst

Pinehurst, N. C., April 9.—(AP)—Geo. T. Dunlap Jr., New York golfer and intercollegiate champion, continued his winning stride in the 31st annual north and south amateur tournament here today, but the defending champion, Eugene Homans of Englewood, N. J., fell by the wayside.

Dunlap, the medalist, won his quarter-finals match on the 13th hole, eliminating Howard Tryon, Elmira, N. Y., 7 and 5. The college champion, playing under the colors of Princeton, was out in 35, one under par. He and the Elmira golfer halved the first hole with birdie 3s. Dunlap sank a 30 foot putt on the fourth, after being trapped, to win it with a par 3, and got another birdie 3 on the ninth.

Coming in, the Princeton representative shot par on the first three holes and ended the match with a birdie 3 on the 13th.

Homans, who won the 1930 tournament, was one down to T. Suffern Tailer, Newport, R. I., at the turn, but the Rhode Islander played more consistent golf on the back nine to win, 5 and 4.

MAROONS TAKE 4 TO 3 BEATING FROM ALL-STARS

The Chicago All-Stars, composed of local semipros, defeated the University of Chicago baseball team, 4 to 3, yesterday afternoon on Greenwood field. Atkinson's home run with Beall on base gave the All-Stars two runs in the third, and drove Will Urban from the mound. Henshaw held the All-Stars until the eighth, when three hits produced two more runs. The Maroons staged a ninth inning rally when McWeeney, third of the semipro pitchers, eased up. McWeeny ended the rally by striking out Clarence Johnson with men on second and third. Box score:

THREE YEAR OLD STARS READY FOR TURF TITLE RACE

fall. During this time he developed a lameness. Last December the firing irons were applied to all four of his legs. If his handlers are able to bring him back to the races in shape to show some of his fine speed of last year it will be one of the most remarkable jobs of patching up a lame horse ever accomplished on the turf in this country.

It is easy to pick up the impression here that among the easterners Equipoise is regarded as the "big horse" in this quintet of young thoroughbreds.

His fine condition—there isn't a blemish on him—causes everybody to marvel. One old timer expressed astonishment that Equipoise throughout his long campaign last season was able to win race after race under what he termed "the beastly whipper" Workman and retain any desire to win.

Take Turns Winning.

It is our opinion that Twenty Grand is more of the rugged route running type than Equipoise or any of the others.

There is possibly a colt in this group that is as good as the Gallant Fox of last year. But don't expect any of them to roll through to one victory after another in the rich specials as Gallant Fox did. The good 3 year olds of this year are too evenly matched, and there are too many good ones. They were able to beat each other last season and they are likely to do it again this year.

And in horse racing an unknown colt comes along every so often to toss dust into the eyes of the so called top-notchers.

BRICKIES, YANKS MEET SUNDAY IN 2D CONTEST

Advance ticket sales indicate a record soccer crowd at Mills stadium Sunday when the Brickies and the New York Yankees, formerly Fall River, clash in the second game of the national championship series.

Patenaude, the visitors' center forward, who was the hero of last week's 6 to 2 victory by scoring five of his team's total goals, will be a marked man in this match. Tom Scott, Chicago's center half, promises to shadow the Frenchman's every move.

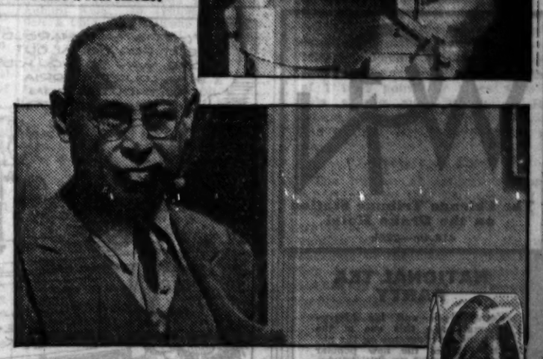
CIGARS WITH FRESH FLAVOR SEALED IN! "COLD-TREATMENT" DOES IT

"You can say for me it's certainly O. K. I like its freshness," comments GEORGE H. ALEXANDERSON.



States MR. PAUL MISCH, 225 W. 47th St., New York City. "So this is one of the new cold-treated cigars. It's sure a real smoke."

THERE'S no smoke joy to compare with the flavor of an absolutely fresh-made cigar. Until recently, only men working in a cigar factory could have that pleasure regularly. But now Dutch Masters makes it possible for every smoker to enjoy a cigar as full of flavor when you light it, as it was at the minute it was made. "Cold-Treatment" does it!

This amazing new process takes a Dutch Masters cigar at the moment it comes from the machine—just when the fine, mellow tobaccos are at their fresh Peak of Perfection . . . . .

And then, by "Cold-Treatment," that fresh-made flavor and mellowness are sealed within the cigar itself. So you'll find as much difference between a Dutch Masters "Cold-treated" cigar and an ordinary cigar, as there is between fresh fruit and dried fruit.

Enjoy this new smoke-pleasure today. Buy a Dutch Masters cigar. Manufactured by the Consolidated Cigar Corporation, New York, N. Y.

All popular sizes and shapes, 10c, 15c, 2 for 25c, and 3 for 50c. Cello-Sealed to protect against pocket breakage.

LOOK FOR THIS PICTURE at the cigar counter. It is on the inside lid of every box of Dutch Masters.

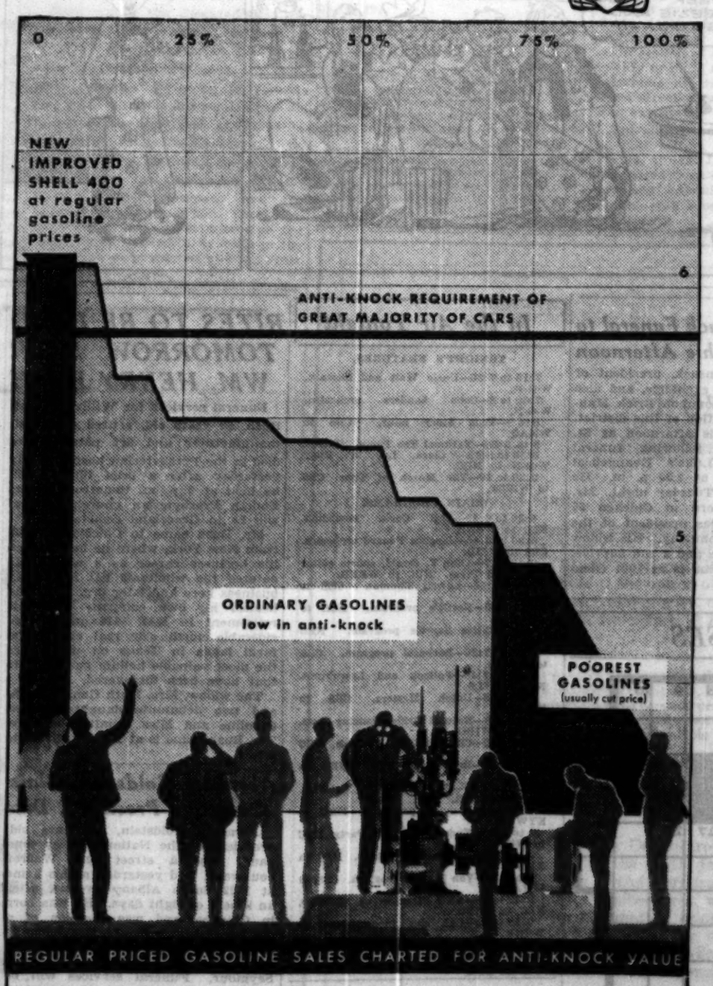
SHELL

It may cut down your driving costs, improve the performance of your motor, amazingly



REGULAR PRICED GASOLINE SALES CHARTED FOR ANTI-KNOCK VALUE

Shell perfects new, high anti-knock gasoline AT REGULAR PRICE

THE chart at right shows why many motorists are getting poorer engine performance, and paying more for repair bills, than they should.

You will see that most of the ordinary gasoline on the market falls below the needs of the great majority of all cars. It was good enough for the engines of 7 years ago. But modern cars require fuel far higher in anti-knock value. They should not use this ordinary gasoline.

Now, notice the great step forward made in New Improved Shell 400. See how much higher it is in the precious quality all cars now need. It is far above most regular priced gasoline in anti-knock value.

Now at the regular price

New Improved Shell 400 is made to bring you all the power, smoothness and get-away your engine is capable of giving. A powerful, volatile fuel, it cuts car upkeep and repairs to the bone.

The amazing thing is that it costs you no more than ordinary gasoline.

Shell believes motorists are entitled to this economy. As a simple matter of good business, Shell proposes to sell this new unique fuel at the low price Shell's huge volume makes possible.

Make this money-saving test

Whatever gasoline you are now using, Shell invites you to prove for yourself these money savings and the real improvement in motor operation.

Drive into any Shell station. Put in 10 gallons of New Improved Shell 400. The great majority will find a real improvement in car performance and a genuine saving in driving costs!

Try it, today. Ask your Shell station attendant about the nation-wide mileage test now under way.

Does it give you more mileage?

While there is evidence that New Improved Shell 400 gives most cars more miles per gallon, only the experience of thousands of drivers can verify this saving. Your Shell station man, at the time he fills your gasoline tank, will hand you a post card like that above. Use New Improved Shell 400 and then tell us on the post card, whether you secure more miles per gallon from it. Your co-operation in this test may help others to reduce their motoring costs

SEE, ON THIS CHART, WHAT SHELL HAS DONE

This chart shows the regular priced gasoline sales on the basis of the anti-knock value of the gasoline. See how most ordinary gasoline falls below the needs of many cars. See for yourself the false economy of cut price gasolines—inferior, if not actually dangerous to your motor. They are costly to use. Notice that New Improved Shell 400 has the indispensable quality all cars need—high anti-knock value. Try New Improved Shell 400 today.

NEW IMPROVED SHELL 400

Definitely better than many premium priced fuels, yet sold at regular gasoline prices. High in the quality all cars need—anti-knock value

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute.

W. F. CAMPBELL, INSURANCE MAN AND LAWYER, DIES

Wallace Farwell Campbell, 67 years old, retired lawyer and insurance executive, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Henry Doerr Jr., in Minneapolis. He was the father also of Mrs. Lawrence Meeker, 70 East Walton place. He was a cousin of John V. Farwell.

Mr. Campbell was graduated at Hamilton college in 1881, and the Columbia Law school two years later. He served as head of the English department of New York university until 1885. In that year he married Virginia Adams. He and his wife moved to Minneapolis, where he practiced law. Later he entered the life insurance business, and for several years was vice president of the Northwestern Life Insurance company. He retired ten years ago. Funeral services will be held in Minneapolis tomorrow. Burial will be at Corning, N. Y.

BUILDING SHOWS BIG MARCH GAIN OVER FEBRUARY

Reversal of Trend Is Indicated.

BY O. A. MATHER.

Those who look to a revival in building construction as a prime factor in the general recovery of trade and industry received data to support their viewpoint yesterday. Statistics gathered by Bradstreet's Review and the F. W. Dodge corporation for March and the first quarter of 1931 indicate a definite reversal of the protracted decline in building that has marked the last five years.

Building construction in March, as reported to Bradstreet's by 202 cities totaled $140,204,507, which was the largest figure since last September. It marked a gain of 47.2 per cent over the total of $95,210,648 reported for February, although falling short by 9.2 per cent of the total of $154,423,067 established in March last year. However, it is likely that a considerable portion of the decline from the figures of a year ago is the result of lower building costs, which have declined with about everything else.

Construction Volume Rises.

The volume of construction last month in the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains was placed at $370,404,300 by the Dodge company, compared with $235,405,100 in February. The three divisions accounting for the March total showed the following figures: Residential building, $101,377,600; nonresidential, $117,340,900; public works and utilities, $151,721,800.

"Although comparisons with March, 1930, are less optimistic, they do indicate a forward movement in six of the thirteen Dodge territories," the summary says. "These were New England, upstate New York, central northwest, southern Michigan, St. Louis and New Orleans. Results for the first quarter of 1931 showed gains over the same period of 1930 in the New England, central northwest and New Orleans districts. Public works and utilities accounted for the advance in the central northwest."

GRAIN CORP. ACQUIRES 112,000,000 BU WHEAT; GETS STORAGE SPACE

George S. Milnor, general manager of the Farmers' National Grain corporation, disclosed yesterday that 112,000,000 bushels of grain was purchased in the year ended Feb. 28 by the government sponsored cooperative agency.

GEORGE S. MILNOR. (Strauss Photo.)

Elevator storage for approximately 25,000,000 bushels was also acquired in the same period, either through purchase or lease, he reported.

Milnor, issuing a statement on grain corporation activities after the annual meeting this week, said:

"In the first year of its operations the Farmers' National has carried its services to farmers in every grain producing area and made contact with buyers on every important market in the United States and in all major importing countries.

"Grain purchased from farmers is handled, stored, sold, and delivered to both domestic and world markets through marketing machinery owned or controlled by the grain producers themselves.

"This achievement gives us considerable satisfaction, as it may be truthfully said that cooperative producers are now selling their wheat direct to the consuming markets of the world and are retaining for themselves the profits of the entire operations."

CREAM OF WHEAT FIRST QUARTER PROFITS SHRINK

Earnings reports for the first quarter of 1931 are beginning to be made. Among the first to arrive was that of Cream of Wheat corporation, which yesterday reported for the period net profit of $486,795, equal to 81 cents a share, against $530,698, or 88 cents a share in the first quarter of 1930.

Underwood-Elliott-Fisher company and consolidated subsidiary companies reported for the first quarter net income of $705,600, equal to 94 cents a share, against $1,367,013, or $1.89 a share, in the corresponding quarter of last year.

Earnings of the General Tank Car corporation for the first quarter of this year will be better than $1.50 a share, a gain over the $1.29 a share earned in the last quarter of 1930, interests close to the organization stated yesterday.

Hoover Commends Efforts to Stabilize Oil Industry

Washington, D. C., April 9.—(AP)—The administration today approved the efforts at stabilization of the oil industry which are being made by the ten principal petroleum producing states.

Both through the federal oil conservation board, composed of four cabinet members, and in a conference at the White House the President and his aids commended the program presented by the oil states advisory committee.

This group, headed by Cicero I. Murray, cousin of Gov. Murray of Oklahoma, laid before the conservation board this morning a plan by which it will continue to function as an adviser and guide to both the industry and the states while the latter are working toward enactment of a compact which will make it possible to limit the production of oil in all fields proportionately.

The aim is to bring supply into relation to demand, reduce steadily the present enormous storage of oil and gasoline above ground, restore prices to a point at which the hundreds of thousands of small wells can continue to exist, and through saving of independent operators from bankruptcy preserve competitive conditions in the nation's second largest industry. Prices, however, were not mentioned at the session.

Meet Next in St. Louis.

The meeting, attended by representatives of virtually every large oil interest, was principally one between the agents of the states and of the federal government.

Murray's committee next will go to St. Louis, where on April 14 they will meet the oil men gathered for the annual session of the American Petroleum institute.

After the session both Secretary Wilbur, chairman of the conservation board, and Murray expressed confidence that the task of bringing voluntary coöperation from so many interests would succeed.

Wilbur admonished the advisory committee and their associates in the industry to turn their backs on the past, avoid playing politics, and get together for constructive work.

Murray's committee spent thirty minutes in conference with the President during the afternoon. Afterward they said they had assurances of full coöperation from the government. They expressed gratitude to Mr. Hoover for this support and for the way in which the coöperation of oil importers was secured recently.

Code Remains in Effect.

New York, April 9.—(AP)—Paul E. Hadlick of the American Petroleum institute, said today the federal trade commission is permitting the code of marketing practices of the petroleum industry to remain in effect pending the commission's final action as to whether a modified code should be made effective.

Mr. Hadlick, who is secretary of the division of marketing of the institute, said the commission's action was in effect an extension of its order of Jan. 30. Under that order the commission rescinded its action abolishing all but three provisions of the code and extended its life for 60 days from Feb. 9.

Oil interests asked another 30 day extension but the commission declined in view of its expectation of an early decision on the whole question.

"The American Petroleum institute has issued instructions to its state code committee to carry on under the code until further order from the commission," Mr. Hadlick said.

The marketing code is designed to regulate and insure fair practices in the industry and to protect the public. The institute has waged a vigorous fight for a modified code along lines designed to meet the commission's objections.

Shore Drive to Have City's Tallest Flats

BY AL CHASE.

What it is claimed will be the finest, tallest and most luxurious coöperative apartment building in the middle west, and perhaps the entire country, is to be erected at 1234 and 1240 Lake Shore drive, at the northwest corner of Scott street. It will be thirty-eight stories, or 459 feet high, by far the loftiest multi-homes project west of the Hudson.

WARREN WRIGHT.

It is to be erected by a syndicate composed of the National Realty and Investment company, of which Benjamin Marshall, architect, is president; Warren Wright, president of the Lincoln park board, is chairman of the board of directors, and Edwin L. Brashears is vice president, and the architects of the proposed building, Rebori & Wentworth. Work probably will start within ninety days.

The structure will be entirely of Indiana limestone on all sides and will front eighty-eight feet on both Lake Shore drive and on Stone street. It will have a south frontage on Scott street of 114 feet. As it will be by far the tallest apartment project in the city, in fact, this part of the country, it will be visible for many miles. The tip of the tower, as stated, will be 459 feet above the street level of the Lake Shore drive.

In the tower section of the contemplated apartment building there'll be eight duplex suites occupying two floors each. All of the apartments will of unusual size and height. The main section of the building will have twenty or more floors of glass inclosed solariums at the Lake Shore drive-Scott street corner, with a south and east exposure.

The site is composed of two parcels of real estate. The southern unit, 44x114, at 1234 Lake Shore drive, was purchased from Charles Munroe. The property adjoining it on the north, 44x114, was bought from Mrs. Moses Wentworth.

New York, April 9.—Railroad shares, unsettled by the publication of the disappointing consolidated earnings of class 1 roads for February and by the fare cuts made by several lines in the middle and far west in an effort to stimulate passenger travel, led a fresh decline on the stock exchange today. Values shrank from 1 to 4 points in the more active list.

The carriers had one of their worst days in the whole downward movement, which began to gain momentum some six weeks ago. Several of the seasoned dividend payers dipped to new low levels for the year or longer. Atchison lost nearly 6 points, New York Central 3¼, New Haven 4, Illinois Central 3¼, Norfolk and Western 6, Union Pacific 7¼, Southern Pacific 3¾, Louisville and Nashville 5½, Missouri Pacific 5¾, and St. Louis and San Francisco 7¼ points. Losses of 1 to 3 points or more were the rule among such issues as Rock Island, Canadian Pacific, Delaware and Hudson, Erie, and Southern railway.

Operate at Loss.

The bureau of railway economics report showed that fifty-seven of the roads figuring in the calculation operated at a loss during the first two months of the year. The February earnings of the class 1 roads totaled but $27,264,467, as contrasted with $59,580,899 for the corresponding month of last year.

AUBURN AUTO CO. DOUBLES PROFIT IN 1ST QUARTER

Earnings Are Equal to $1.06 a Share.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The anxiously awaited first quarter earnings report of Auburn Automobile was released last night by President E. L. Cord. The statement disclosed net earnings for the three months ended Feb. 28 of $202,409, equivalent to $1.06 a share on the 191,292 shares outstanding at the close of the period.

This was more than double the earnings for the corresponding period last year, when the firm made net profit of $96,622, or 51 cents a share on the same capitalization. The company is said to have operated at a loss in December and January.

Contrary to the expectations of the financial community, the report contained no indication of March earnings. The first quarter of the company's fiscal year ends Feb. 28, but it had been reported that a statement on March earnings would also be made public. It is understood now that these figures will not be made public. The company had previously reported record shipments for March and street estimates of profits for the month varied from $4 to $6 a share.

Current Assets $13,021,752.

The firm's balance sheet at the close of the first quarter showed current assets of $13,021,752, as compared with current liabilities of $3,531,269.

Successful selling, coupled with a program of stringent economies, made possible the results of the first quarter, President E. L. Cord said. Distributors delivered more cars in the first three months of 1931 than during the entire year of 1930, he declared.

Because of the spectacular market action of Auburn stock this year and the increasing activity in the shares of the affiliated Cord corporation, the report had been awaited with considerable interest. Yesterday both of these issues shared in the general market decline.

Active Shares Decline.

Transactions in Cord on the Chicago exchange constituted a good share of the total volume. Its fractional net loss was typical of the action of the market's active shares. Moderate gains were recorded in some instances, however.

The better demand for Muncie Gear stocks was evidenced again as each issue ran up to a new high quotation for the year. Increased interest has been manifested in the stocks since the recent announcement that it will make a free wheeling device for Ford cars which will be distributed through Sears, Roebuck & Co.

The issuance of the 1930 report of Libby-McNeill had no important effect market wise. The common was dealt in rather actively, but held around its previous closing price. Utility stocks were dull and little changed.

BUILDING SHOWS BIG MARCH GAIN OVER FEBRUARY

Reversal of Slump Trend Is Indicated.

brokers' loans in the last week, according to the weekly report of the federal reserve board. The shrinkage was $53,000,000, which brought the total down to $1,822,000,000. The current figure is less than half that of a year ago, when the total was $3,994,000,000, and it is only $106,000,000 above the low level established on Feb. 4. The detailed report shows that interior banks and non-banking lenders increased their loans to brokers by $42,000,000 and $19,000,000, respectively, in the last week but this was more than offset by the New York banks reducing their own loans by $114,000,000.

The demand for credit for commercial purposes also slackened in the last week following the completion of month-old settlements. The weekly statement of the federal reserve system shows a decline of $21,045,000 in borrowings of the member banks, which now owe $142,585,000 to the reserve banks. The reserve banks bought $5,107,000 additional bankers' acceptances and maintained their holdings of government securities. Deposits declined $3,711,000 but note circulation expanded $7,332,000.

Gold and total reserves increased $15,819,000 and $13,803,000, respectively, and the ratio of reserves to liabilities rose to 83.8 per cent, compared with 83.5 per cent last week.

Borrowings Decline.

The New York reserve bank made no change in its 2 per cent rediscount rate. Its statement showed a decline of $1,432,000 in member bank borrowings, which now stand at $34,755,000. At the same time the reserve bank sold $15,911,000 of bankers' acceptances but made no change in government securities. Deposits receded $38,667,000. Reserves declined $29,135,000, but the reserve ratio rose to 83.9 per cent, compared with 85 per cent a week ago.

The Chicago reserve bank reported a decline of $688,000 in member bank borrowings, which now total $11,635,000. The reserve bank bought $8,119,000 of bankers' acceptances and maintained its government securities. Deposits expanded $13,628,000. Reserves increased $15,791,000, but the reserve ratio sagged to 84.4 per cent, compared with 85.6 per cent last week.

RAILROAD SHARES HAVE BUMPY TIME ON WALL STREET

Radio Corporation Victim of Attack by Bears.

viewed from the sidelines was a determined bear attack on Radio Corporation which drove that trading favorite to a new price bottom for the movement, below 20. Turnover of this company's shares accounted for nearly 10 per cent of the day's total transactions. The selling—much of it reputedly by syndicate interests who had been active in bulling the shares through the February rise—naturally served to arouse renewed discussion of the outlook for the corporation's preferred dividend in view of the expectation that its first quarter earnings are not expected to be very encouraging.

United Corporation was another big leaguer to come under heavy fire from the bear camp during the earlier dealings, but it met with enough support to enable it to finish within half a point or so of last night's closing figure.

Other Preferreds Sink.

A number of preferred stocks experienced abrupt sinking spells in the course of the day. General Steel Castings preferred, on its first appearance since late last December, suffered a precipitate drop of 15½ points. Warner Brothers preferred, on a few transactions, yielded for a sheer drop of 13½ points, later recovering about a point.

Other weak preferred issues included those of New York Dock company, with a decline of 5 points, and Abitibi Power, with a decline of about 3 points. All the foregoing stocks were in new low ground, and all are dividend payers, though current levels for practically all of them suggest plainly the belief that present rates are not likely to be maintained.

Auburn Auto did its daily dozen in the bear camp, rubbing out some 13 points of its recent gains. Allied Chemical and Dye dropped another 2½ points and Worthington Pump followed its own nose for a dip of about 2.

Motor shares were steady to slightly higher and the tobaccos more than held their own as a group. The utilities developed no pronounced trend.

Call money continued easy at 1½ per cent.

NASH MOTORS TO PAY QUARTERLY DOLLAR DIVIDEND

Directors of the Nash Motors company met yesterday and authorized the regular quarterly disbursement of $1 a share. At the same time the company issued a report for the first quarter of its fiscal year, ended Feb. 28, showing net earnings of $1,099,193, which was equivalent to 40 cents a share on the 2,750,000 shares of capital stock outstanding.

In the first quarter of the previous year the company earned net profit of $1,782,512, or 65 cents a share, on the capital stock. In paying the regular quarterly dividend at this time it was necessary for the directors to dip into surplus for $1,638,000, which was the excess of dividend requirements over earnings. At the close of the quarter the company had cash and government securities in its treasury of $35,747,455.

C. W. Nash, president, said that production is being stepped up and that prospects for the industry are growing more favorable.

At the meeting of directors C. H. Bliss, sales manager, was named vice president and director of sales.

Shipments of Stutz cars during the first quarter of this year were approximately 9½ times greater than in the same quarter last year, Col. E. S. Gorrell, president of the Stutz Motor Car Company of America, announced yesterday. Each month has shown encouraging increases in business, and during March shipments were 4 times larger than in March, 1930, he stated.

SEE INDUSTRIAL OUTLOOK FOR 1931 AS MUCH BETTER

"Industry appears to be in better shape in the state now than it has for some time and it will probably continue on the upward path from now on," C. L. Harden, secretary of the industrial development committee of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, said yesterday at a meeting of the committee at the Palmer house.

Thirty members from all over Illinois attended and discussed plans for helping the industrial development in the state for the coming year. The opinion was expressed by the members that the year 1931 offers unusual opportunities for laying the foundation of sound industrial growth. They characterized 1931 as a promising year for industrial investigation, declaring that industries are studying their situations carefully in order to determine whether or not a change of location would be beneficial.

"Industries are more than ever anxious to improve distribution costs," declared C. A. Walt of the Illinois Power and Light corporation, Decatur. "Illinois cities have a splendid opportunity to present their cases to industries at this particular time. In boom times industries don't worry about location. Now they are thinking most seriously about it."

Make Formal Offering of Fox Film Debentures

Formal offering of the $30,000,000 five year 6 per cent convertible gold debentures of Fox Film corporation is made today at 98 and interest to yield about 6.45 per cent by the underwriting group headed by Chase Securities corporation and including Dillon, Read & Co., Bancamerica-Blair corporation, Harris Trust and Savings bank, Chatham-Phenix corporation, Hayden, Stone & Co., and Central-Illinois company. The debentures are convertible after Oct. 1 at the rate of 30 shares of stock for each $1,000 debenture.

BOND REDEMPTIONS.

Bonds called in whole or in part during the last three months of the year aggregated $293,120,360, compared with $113,816,000 in the first quarter last year.

EUROPEAN WHEAT DEMAND REVIVES MARTS FOR TIME

Later Selling Results in Only Small Gains.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A material revival in the European demand for Manitoba wheats, with sales estimated at 2,000,000 bu or more and the consequent removal of hedges against the grain by purchases of futures here and at Winnipeg, lifted the leading North American markets yesterday around 1c above the finish of the previous day. However, there was no follow up to the buying and as soon as it ceased the local market reacted on selling by holders of offers and by local longs, and toward the last there was evening up for the government report due after the close. Final trades on wheat futures at Chicago were within a fraction of the bottom, with net gains of ¼@¾c with July, 61⅛@61¾c; September, 60@60¼c, and December, 62⅝@62c. May finished unchanged at 58c. Winnipeg showed more resistance to pressure than did the local market and closed with net gains of ½@¾c, the July being 59¾c.

European Stocks Small.

Imposition of high import duties on wheat by many of the European countries has resulted in abnormal consumption of the native crops, with the result that stocks are regarded as small and it has become necessary to secure supplies from overseas. Outlook for the new winter wheat crop abroad is regarded as somewhat below what it was at this time last year. There was also some buying of futures here credited to local cash interests who were credited with having sold around 140,000 bu to mills, part of the grain being in elevators outside of Chicago.

As a result of the pronounced increase in the demand for Canadian durum wheat premiums have advanced 4c in the last two days. The trade is now inclined to pay more attention to moisture conditions in the American and Canadian northwest, as seeding has started both sides of the international line and reports from leading interests show that there is a rather alarming shortage in subsoil moisture in some sections.

Anticipate Bearish Report.

Failure of the local wheat market to maintain its advance was generally regarded as due to selling in anticipation of a bearish government report, and the estimate of 644,000,000 bu winter wheat by the latter, showing 25,000,000 bu above the average of the recent private returns, was regarded as favorable for a lower level of prices, as it compared with 604,000,000 bu harvested in 1930.

Foreign wheat markets showed independent strength, with Liverpool gaining ⅝@⅞d for the day with a better cash demand in evidence, while Buenos Aires was unchanged at the close.

Corn Has Firm Undertone.

The corn market showed a relatively firm undertone the greater part of the day, although holding within a range of around ¾c, and finished unchanged to ⅛c higher, with May, 60⅝@60¼c; July, 62⅝@62¼c; September, 60⅝@60¾c, and December, 53⅛@53¾c. There was some buying of September corn against sales of wheat by a local operator. Improvement in the shipping demand, with sales of 70,000 bu, tended to restrict operations on the bear side, although many of the local operators are favorable to a lower level of prices. Country offerings were not large, as farmers are getting busy in the fields. Rains are delaying the harvesting of the new Argentine crop.

Board of Trade Attains Eighty-third Birthday

The Chicago Board of Trade had its eighty-third birthday yesterday, having been established April 9, 1848, when eighty-two optimistic merchants met and decided that a board of trade to look after Chicago's interests and to act as a civic body was necessary. For thirty-three years following the board grew rapidly, reaching its peak in 1881. Its present membership is 1,367. Seats were originally $5 to $10. They have been up to $62,000 and at present are worth around $10,000.

Measures governing trading in grains, provisions, flour, and highwines were formulated and methods for doing business in a regular way were established. The Chicago Board of Trade is largely responsible for evolving the methods governing trading and adjustment of differences, the gathering of statistics of grain movements and crops, and devising improved methods of storing grain which gave it recognition as the world's greatest grain market.

Opportunity Seeks the Man

A group of exceptionally successful business men long experienced in finance have formed a new company with offices on lower La Salle Street to sell the highest type of securities in a new way.

There is need for a few men, only, of the highest caliber and exceptional ability, preferably with a background of security selling experience, who are now employed but find their efforts somewhat restricted by the limitations of their present organizations . . . For such men qualified to fill sales executive positions there is waiting an opportunity far above the average.

Only written applications for interview will be considered. These must give full history of applicants and will be treated in strict confidence by us as intermediary.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 2,000; hogs, 14,000; sheep, 12,000.

Live stock prices fluctuated sharply on yesterday's session. The market was unsettled in all branches, with cattle and hogs showing the most unevenness. Warm weather, coupled with narrowing eastern demand, were the adverse factors in the trade. Supplies continued small but were beyond requirements in most instances.

A scattering of lightweight hogs of choice quality met outlet at steady to 10c higher prices during the first few rounds of trading, while others dragged along on a weak to 15c lower basis and in extreme instances showed even more loss. The extreme top was up 5c at $8.05, while the general average remained unchanged at $7.40.

Most of the 9,000 left at the close were being held off the market, resulting in a "catch as catch can" trade at the finish. Outsiders bought only 3,500 head. Another slight setback in the wholesale market for fresh pork loins curtailed small packer and city butcher demands.

September Hogs Bring $8.75.

Heavy grades of hogs for next September delivery were sold at $8.75 on the futures market yesterday. April light were offered at $8.25 and bid $7.75, while May offers were at $8.40 and bids at $8.25 when the market closed. June light were offered at $8.70 and bid $8.25. On the "to arrive" market lightweights for Saturday's delivery were bid $7.90. Mediums for Saturday were bid $7.50, and heavy grades were bid $7.20.

There was a scarcity of highly finished steers and yearlings yesterday and a few of these kinds filled special orders at strong to 25c higher prices. The bulk moved slowly later in the day when some decline was noted in medium grades. Good 1,517 lb steers topped the price list at $9.65, although the trade is carrying a $10.50 quotation on prime weighty beeves.

Springs Lambs Not Wanted.

The market for native spring lambs finished in a demoralized condition after a sharply lower opening yesterday, with closing sales several dollars below the high point of the forenoon. Greeks, the principal buyers at this time of the year, were extremely cautious and hundreds of choice 30@60 lb lambs were carried over on bids of $9.00@9.50.

Some of the best were sold at $10.00@11.00 and a few on the early rounds reached $12.00@14.50, no criterion of the later trade. Aged lambs sold at steady to 15c lower prices, the best to city butchers stopping at $9.70, while packers took most handy weights at $9.50@9.65. Lambs averaging 100@105 lbs sold at $8.50@8.85. Aged sheep were in line with yesterday's late decline.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

A bearish construction was placed on the government report on wheat, estimates being higher than the best figures of the private reports. Nat C. Murray's estimate for Clement Curtis of 642,000,000 bu was within 2,000,000 bu of the government's. Unless something happens to the crop, there will be another big surplus. Prospects for the wheat crop are so good and supplies carried over from the last few years so large that the average trader is disposed to go slow on the buying side and at the same time does not care to press sales, except on bulges, owing to the comparatively low price levels and limited export business.

The feed situation is attracting more attention. The demand for cash oats has improved the last week and yesterday sales by Chicago interests of grain here and at outside points aggregated over 210,000 bu. Speculators have been liquidating oats for two weeks past, their offerings being absorbed by local and northwestern cash interests at prices around 30c and under, and oats are regarded as having a feeding value that has been a factor in increasing consumptive demand.

The J. Rosenbaum Grain corporation has let a contract for an addition to the Irondale elevator at Irondale, Ill., for tanks to hold 1,500,000 bu of grain. They are to be ready by July 1

CO-OPS HANDLE COTTON

Business of the American Cotton Cooperative association in 1930 was 2,100,000 bales, as given by a statement issued at Washington. This is said to be about double the business in 1929. A member of the farm board was quoted as saying that expectations are that there will be a sizable reduction in cotton acreage this year. The cotton receiving season is about over and farmers have started planting their new crop in many sections. Cotton markets developed strength and advanced sharply early in the day, it being a natural action following the recent decline. Sentiment, however, remains bearish. Many shorts covered and the market showed strength until after midday, when a selling movement developed, which resulted in practically all gains being lost. Strength in Liverpool, with a net gain of 10 points with spot sales of 5,000 bales had a good deal to do with bringing about a covering movement.

At the close futures in Chicago were 2 points lower to 3 points higher, with New Orleans 1 lower to 4 points higher and New York, 6@9 points higher. Spots in New York were up 5 points at 10.20c, with New Orleans unchanged at 9.35c; Galveston, 10.15c, and Houston 10.05c. Prices follow:

BELIEVE SUGAR CONFERENCE IS NEAR SUCCESS

PARIS, April 9.—(AP)—The world sugar conference was believed to be measurably near success tonight when the Cuban and Javan delegates met to determine the amount of quota releases at such time as sugar reaches a price higher than 2 cents a pound. The conclusions will be presented to the conference tomorrow for discussion.

Cuban interests proposed that quota releases under the Chadbourne plan should be set for a 2¼ cent price and a 2½ cent price and perhaps for higher prices. The Javanese proposed only a 5 per cent quota release when sugar reaches 2 cents.

Estimate Supplies.

New York, April 9.—(AP)—B. W. Dyer & Co., sugar economists, estimated yesterday that world sugar supplies will attain the unprecedented total of 11,589,000 long tons by Aug. 31, 1931. This estimated stock figure represents an increase of 907,000 tons, or 8.5 per cent, over Aug. 31, 1930, the economists said.

Predict '31 Wheat Crop Above 5 Year Average

A winter wheat crop of 644,000,000 bu, or 40,000,000 bu more than harvested in 1930 and 97,000,000 bu above the 5 year average was suggested by the government report given to the trade late Thursday. Should the final returns show a total as large as the indicated yield at the present time it would be the fourth largest crop on record, and the heaviest since 1919 when it was 760,000,000 bu.

The report was 25,000,000 bu above the average of the recent private returns, and 2,000,000 bu more than indicated by Nat C. Murray. The indicated yield is around 16.3 bu per acre. A condition of 88.8 was practically the same as the private returns, and showed 9.6 points above the average of the last 10 years.

Condition of rye of 81.6 was about

Whatever it was Mr. Norma ever to get, he carried awa
Washington so much encoura that he cabled London in a mo mistic vein. The immediate re was a buoyant tendency of th don stock market yesterday.

The report gained currency don that the upward trend of was due to inside information nating from the Bank of E that Governor Norman had br to Mr. Hoover and Mr. Mellon th ject of cancellation or scaling of war debts with encouragi sults.

Mellon Denies Report.

Mr. Mellon pronounced this wholly without foundation, de that a reopening of the war deb cellation question was discusse ing Mr. Norman's visit.

The prevailing theory at the ury is that Mr. Norman's optim report was based upon the g impression obtained by the E financier that the recovery of bu in the United States has definite
m. This is known to be the vi
President Hoover and Mr. Mello it is not doubted that they imp it to Mr. Norman with the re for their belief.

Mr. Norman also learned with faction that President Hoover h intention of acceding to the requ the senate to initiate an interna conference for the purpose of en ing the value of silver. The pri silver has declined for a numb reasons, among them being the ish government's debasement o silver coinage and placing India gold standard basis.

Seeks Opinion on Business?

Some of those who talked wit was to ascertain the precise bus situation in this country in ord determine how soon America co expected again to furnish Europe a meal ticket. When America business selling foreign shares bonds in this country. Since times set in here the foreign curities dealers have been manife the same indignation at the failu the American meal ticket as the don and Paris innkeepers and re sitmers at the falling off in Ame patronage.

If Mr. Norman came seeking definite action by United States thorities to ameliorate financial c tions in England, as in 1927 whe cured reduction of the redisc rate by federal reserve banks, he not mention it in his conference the federal reserve board. Accor to members of the board, only ge aspects of world finance and t were discussed.

Board Majority on Guard.

It is possible that the Britisher m facilitate in future sessions of the secretary is chairman and ex of member. If so, however, they will subjected to the closest scrutiny, there is now a majority of the bo on the guard against covert sche to pull British chestnuts out of fire, such as the Norman exploit 1927. In fact, there is now a policy of the board that Mr. Mel himself cannot control, as was illustrated repeatedly in the mon immediately preceding and follo the stock market crash of 1929.

Before over the inside history of board is written there will be m moving descriptions of the dram scenes in the conference room wh
